The Book

FOR the thirteenth year since these gray walls rose by the azure inland sea, the Cap & Gown presents its record of life in the University of Chicago. It tells of effort in laboratory and classroom, of activity in college and class, of the whirl of college journalism, and the glitter of college drama, of the rush of society, of triumph and defeat on the athletic field—of all that actually is on and about the campus. To portray this life simply, truthfully, and with understanding has been our aim, as representatives of the Junior Class.

Charles Richmond Henderson

TO every generation of graduates from the University of Chicago, Dr. Charles Richmond Henderson, to whom this book is dedicated, is known. After the turmoil of registration is over, the first clear impression which the freshman receives is of the kindly personality of the University Chaplain as he attends his first Junior College chapel; four years later, as he swings out of Mandel with his diploma, the same gentle-voiced figure is in his mind. Dr. Henderson has won world-wide reputation as a sociologist, but it is as chaplain that he has obtained the firm individual grip on the soul of every Chicago man and woman.

Dr. Henderson was born at Covington, Ind., December 18, 1848, the son of Albert Henderson. His grandfather, Dr. John Lambert Richmond, a physician of Indianapolis, was a friend of Henry Ward Beecher. Himself a teacher of medicine, he was one of the founders of Denison University and Franklin College. After having studied at the Lafayette, Ind., High School and Kalamazoo College, Dr. Henderson received the degree of A.B. in 1870 from the old Chicago University. He was awarded honors in the Junior and Senior years. After studying political economy under Van Buren Denslow he was graduated from the Theological Seminary in 1873 and in the same year was granted the degree of A.M. from the old University. Both of these baccalaureate degrees were confirmed by the new University. In 1883, he received the degree of D.D. from the Seminary. In 1901 he received the degree of Ph.D., summa cum laude, at the University of Leipsic in economics and statistics.

In 1873, Dr. Henderson became pastor at Terre Haute, Ind. While there he established the Charity Organization Society, was a trustee of the Rose Orphans' Home, helped to secure legislation needed for public libraries, and provided lectures for workmen. Leaving Terre Haute in 1882, he became pastor of the Woodward Avenue Baptist Church in Detroit and remained there until he came to the University at its inception in 1892. While pastor in Detroit, he was made chairman of the committee which settled the street car strike of 1891-2.

Dr. Henderson is a member of various societies, among which are the American Economic Association, the American Sociological Society; he was president of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections in 1899 and president of the National Prison Association in 1902, and has been president of the National Children's Home Society since 1899. He has been a director of charitable organizations in Terre Haute and Detroit and is one of the prime movers of the Chicago Bureau of Charities. Governor Deneen appointed him secretary of the Industrial Insurance Commission. He went as the official delegate of the United States to the International Prison Congress at Budapest in 1905, and in that year was appointed by the permanent committee of the International Workingmen's Insurance Congress as American representative; in 1908 he was reappointed to report on the progress of industrial insurance at the congress at Rome in October.

The publications of Dr. Henderson have been as numerous as his activities have been vigorous.

He is a contributor to the "American Journal of Sociology," "American Journal of Theology," "Journal of Political Economy," "Dial," "Proceedings of the National Prison Association," the "National Conference of Charities and Corrections," and the "International Congress of Charities, Correction and Philanthropy," and "Charities Review" (now "Charities and Commons"), and various other papers. He wrote an article for "Jahrbuecher fuer Nationaloekonomie und Statistik," 1898, on "Poor Relief in the United States." Among his books are "Introduction to the Study of the Dependent, Defective and Delinquent Classes;" "The Social Spirit in America;" "Social Settlements"; "Social Elements" (now translated into Japanese); "Modern Methods of Charity," and "Modern Prison Systems," and "Industrial Insurance" (in German and English), and the "Poor Laws of Indiana" (in French), the "Economic Problems of the Smaller Colleges of Illinois" (dissertation in German).

Since its founding he has been Chaplain of the University. He is now Professor of Sociology and head of the Department of Ecclesiastical Sociology. From 1892 to 1894 he was Recorder of the University in addition to his other duties. Since 1883 he has also been a trustee of Kalamazoo College.

For professional uses, Dr. Henderson has studied Latin, Greek, Hebrew, German, French, Italian, Spanish and more recently Russian.

But after all is said, the more intangible elements of Dr. Henderson's achievements have made the greatest impression upon succeeding University classes. Whether on the stage in Mandel, or in the little office in Cobb, or somewhere about the campus, Chaplain Henderson always radiates the same universal kindness. To the student in trouble or perplexity he has always rendered encouragement that really counted because it came from his heart. Dr. Henderson is great as a sociologist and practical reformer, but he is greater as a man.

The Alice Freeman Palmer Chimes

ALICE Freeman Palmer, in whose memory the sweet-toned chimes are to ring forth from Mitchell Tower for many years to come, is remembered in the University of Chicago as a great and noble woman who spread her kindly influence in the early days of the University. From 1893 to 1895 she was dean of women in the University. She died December 6, 1902.

The chimes cost $10,000 and were made in London by the world-famed makers of the chimes in St. Paul's and Westminster. The money was raised by contributions secured by the University Memorial Committee, of which Mr. Charles L. Hutchinson was treasurer. Each bell bears an inscription relating one of the qualities for which Mrs. Palmer was loved. The lines have been selected from the Scriptures by her husband, Professor George Herbert Palmer of Harvard University, and are as follows:

A GRACIOUS WOMAN, REFRAINING HONOR,
ROOTED AND GROUND IN LOVE,
EASY TO BE ENTREATED,
PERVENE IN SPIRIT,
ALWAYS REJOICING,
MAKING THE LAME TO WALK, THE BLIND TO SEE,
THE SWEETNESS OF HER LIPS INCREASING LEARNING,
GREAT IN COUNCIL AND MIGHTY IN WORK,
IN GOD'S LAW MEDITATING DAY AND NIGHT.

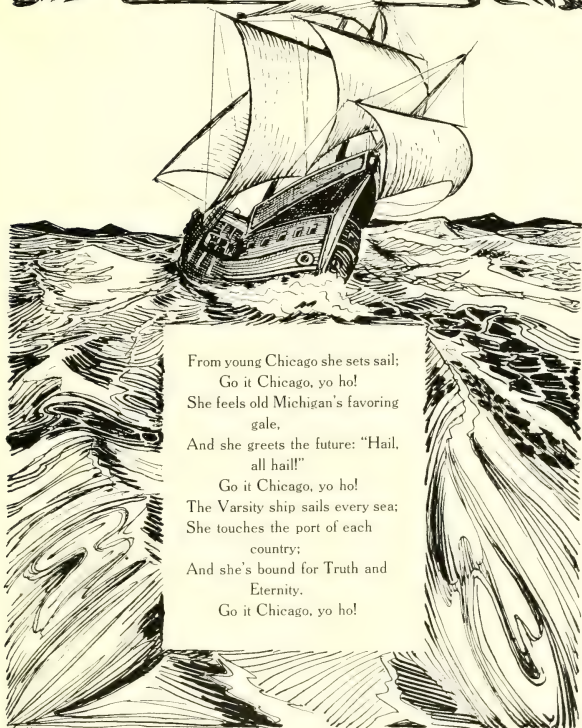

Professor Palmer also has suggested that the following inscription be placed on a tablet in Mitchell Tower:

JOYFULLY TO RECALL

PROFESSOR ALBERT A. MICHELSON

International Honors to Professor Michelson

THE first Nobel prize to come to this country was awarded this year to Professor Albert A. Michelson, head of the Department of Physics of the University of Chicago. Simultaneously with the receipt of the Nobel prize, Professor Michelson had conferred upon him the Copley medal, the highest honor within the gift of the Royal Society of Great Britain. This is a combination of honors which is probably unique in the history of science.

According to the terms of the award, the Copley medal was bestowed upon Professor Michelson for his "investigations in optics." Since practically all of Professor Michelson's researches have been in the field of optics, it is probable that the medal was intended as a recognition of his work as a whole, rather than of any particular part of it. The most salient features of this work may be summarized as follows:

1. Determinations of the velocity of light (1879-1886). The final value obtained, namely 299,860 kilometers per second, is still the world's standard.
2. Experiments on the relative motion of the earth and ether (1886-1887).

3. Investigations with the interferometer (1888-1895). This is an instrument devised by Prof. Michelson and used for the double purpose of making accurate linear measurements and studying the nature of the bright lines of the spectra of incandescent gases and vapors. This latter problem is one of especial importance since there seems to be no more promising means of extending our knowledge of that most fundamental of all the problems of science—the problem of the nature of matter, than by studying with sufficiently powerful instruments the character of the light waves emitted by incandescent gases and vapors, the simplest types of matter available for experiments. The chief result of Professor Michelson's investigations with the interferometer in this field was to show that light from even the simplest sources is much more complex than had been supposed, and to determine in a measure the character of the complexity.

4. The invention of the echelon spectroscope (1898). The echelon is another instrument of great power for analyzing light waves, and one which has the advantage over the interferometer of giving more direct indications.

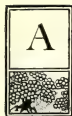

5. The improvement of the diffraction grating (1903-1908). The gratings which are now being produced at Ryerson Physical Laboratory are considerably more powerful and more perfect than any others which have hitherto been made, and some interesting and new results on the nature of certain simple kinds of light have just been obtained with them. It was these results in part which led to the award of the Nobel prize.

According to the terms of this year's award, the Nobel prize was given "to Albert A. Michelson for his optical instruments of precision and his spectroscopic and metalogical investigations carried out therewith." The optical instruments of precision refer, doubtless, to the interferometer, the echelon spectroscope, and the new ten-inch gratings, including under this last head the ruling engine with which these gratings were made.

The University of Chicago Settlement

ALTHOUGH slowly changing in the details of its activity, the University of Chicago Settlement has been for the past year as ever the same vital effective force for social righteousness in the sordid territory "back of the yards." Miss McDowell and her fellow workers have always aimed to perform the necessary functions of the community only as long as the community has been unable to perform them for itself. This year through the fuller utilization of Davis Square, the reaction against the saloon—one of which yet exists for every twenty-three voters, and the dawning consciousness of decency and social economy of the men and women for whom they labor, the residents of the Settlement have been able to devote more of their energies to developing new phases of their work. The "School of Citizenship" has been established, the scope of the kindergarten enlarged, and more attention paid to the purely social side of the institution.

The outlook for next year is particularly bright because of the added interest aroused among the undergraduates by the two Settlement socials of last winter.

A CONSTITUENT

The Egyptian Expedition of the University of Chicago

EARLY in summer of 1905, the University of Chicago decided to enter Egyptian archeological research the following winter. Dr. James Henry Breasted, Professor of Egyptology, was selected as director of the expedition, and at once began to devise a plan for making the first complete and accurate records of the Nubian monuments of the Middle Empire, with their inscriptions, so that their data might be available for scientific research.

Christmas day, 1906, saw the expedition embark in its houseboat at Assuan, below the first cataract, for the 200 mile trip to Wady Halfa at the foot of the second cataract. Its equipment for measuring and photographing monuments and copying the inscriptions on them was more thorough than that possessed by any previous expedition, and the use of the camera, as planned and carried out, was successful to an extent never attempted before. The speed shown in making preparations was due to the cordial assistance rendered by the Egyptian government, the Sudanese government and the Department of Antiquities. It was, seemingly, unprecedented in this land of buckra (tomorrow).

The monuments between the first and second cataracts were recorded the first year, and during the second year the territory between the second and the fourth cataracts was covered, completing the work south of the first cataract. It is at the first cataract that the ancient Egyptians believed the Nile sprang from the interior of the earth.

The climax of achievement came with the discovery and exact location of the lost city of Amenhotep IV, Ikhnaton, the dreamer king, who knew but one God, although he lived centuries before Abraham. This wonderful capital lay far to the South in the land of the Sudan and a few columns which still remain testify by their defaced inscriptions and reliefs to later efforts to stamp out this heresy as well as to the extent and magnificence of this empire.

Whether the expedition drifted down the placid Nile or remained for weeks before the great Cliff temple Abu Simbel, the inspiration of the work never slackened. Just the charm of the land is most powerful. Although birdless and treeless, the soft winds from the desert plains seem to whisper irresistible stories of enchantment. This fascination increased the eagerness with which photographic records were made of panel after panel of that great wall of the Abu Simbel temple which is entirely given over to the scenes of the battle of Kadesh, the oldest battle whose tactics are recorded.

But Egypt, which has hidden its secrets so long, gives them up whimsically and grudgingly, and its mysteries will continue to challenge the thoughtful efforts of the world for centuries to come as it has done for millenniums past.

The University's Visitors

O speak of the many visitors to the University of Chicago who in the course of a year come to lecture for us or to look, at least, upon us is impossible in a Cap and Gown review. As a matter of record, however, it is interesting here to set down the names of those who have honored us with their presence. In addition to those who have come as visitors—President Eliot of Harvard, President Wheeler of California, Professor Grosvenor of Amherst, the head of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa—those who have come as speakers on educational topics—President G. Stanley Hall, Superintendent Chancellor of Washington—and those men of letters and the stage who have spoken for various clubs in the University—Hamlin Garland, Donald Robertson, and a host of others—there have been five principal groups of contributors to extra interest in our University life. The formation of the Germanistic Society of Chicago, of which President Judson is chairman, has made it possible to bring to our city German scholars of prominence, active in the Fatherland or in their adopted country. Some of these have come to the University; notably Professor Kuno Francke and Professor Hugo Münsterberg. The relationship of the University to the Alliance Française has fostered a friendship, too, with France; hence this year we have had visits from M. Madelin of the Alliance Française, M. Henry La Brué, editor of Le Temps, and, most conspicuous of our French guests, the Abbe Klein, who conducted during the summer quarter an unusually interesting religious service in Mandel Hall. The work of the Historical group of departments has been illustrated by lectures formal and informal by Professor Burr of Cornell and Professors Daggett and Goebel of Harvard, McPherson of Johns Hopkins, Judge Clelland of the Municipal Court of Chicago, R. R. McCormick, president of the Sanitary District of Chicago, and William Jennings Bryan. In the religious field the two most notable visitors have been the Reverend Charles Cuthbert Hall, who twice represented the University of Chicago in the Far East as lecturer on the

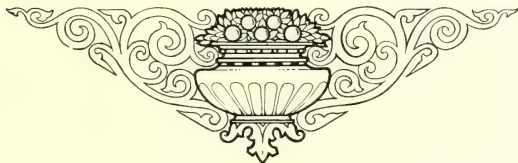

Wm. J. BRYAN

Haskell foundation, a man who while delivering his important series of lectures at the University in December endeared himself more than ever to the University community, and whose death therefore has been felt as keenly by our institution as by the Union Theological Seminary, over which he presided. General William Booth of the Salvation Army while on his American tour inspired an audience in Mandel with increased respect for the courage and self-sacrifice manifested by the members of his great body in their effort to uplift the most despondent members of society. In addition to these lectures many on science might be listed. So numerous, however, are they that it is impossible to say more than that the University of Chicago was during the Christmas holidays the meeting-place of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The unusual success of this meeting as regards number in attendance as well as the quality of the discussions culminated in a distinctively University of Chicago triumph—the great dinner to Prof. Michelson on his return with the Nobel prize. At this dinner in the Auditorium all the prominent scientists of America were present. So close was their relationship to the University during the days of the meetings that this convocation of scientists may be considered one of most interesting and important features of our extra-University interests during the past year.

The Campus

1908

Improvements on the Campus

WITHIN the last three years $45,000 has been spent in improving the University campus. It may be difficult to comprehend how so large a sum has been invested, as improvements have been gradual, and very often below the surface of the ground. It is this steady work of the Department of Buildings and Grounds that has converted the main campus from the original marsh and sand lot to its present beauty.

Work underground has included the laying of new sewer systems, water pipes, and steam heating conduits. On the surface new concrete walks have been laid; trees have been planted and lawns graded. The planting of a tree calls for the removal of over six feet of sand, this being replaced by rich soil. A foot of sand has been removed from the permanent lawns.

The department is now engaged in planting sixty-four elm trees in two rows, along each side of the cement driveway between Cobb Hall and Lexington. The trees are fifteen years old and consequently about six inches in diameter. As soon as this has been completed all the lawns on the north third of the Quadrangles will be brought to grade and made permanent. This part of the campus will then be practically in a finished condition.

The next improvement which Superintendent McLean will undertake will be the building of an underground cement cellar behind Kent Theater to provide storage room for explosives and inflammables which are used in the laboratory. When this is completed the remainder of the season will be given over to building drives, laying walks, and planting trees in the central open space in front of the laboratories. It is hoped that by the end of the season one may drive through the campus from Hull gate on Fifty-fifth street to the new entrance on Fifty-ninth street.

The Harper Memorial Library

WITHIN another fiscal year the students may expect to see ground broken along the Midway between Foster Hall and South Divinity for the newest and most important of University buildings, the William Rainey Harper Memorial Library. Already $157,000 has been raised by a vigorous campaign. When the funds reach the $200,000 on July 1, 1908, Mr. John D. Rockefeller, the founder of the University, will present the trustees with $3.00 for every $1.00 subscribed, making a total of $600,000 for the new library.

At the same time that the library is erected the new classical building will be built. Money for this handsome building is already at hand and the plans are complete. It will stand on the Midway, with the library proper on the East and South Divinity on the West. Together with the library and a building to be erected near Foster Hall it will constitute what will be known as the William Rainey Harper Memorial group.

Plans for these new buildings are in the hands of the architects, Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge, who have prepared a plaster cast of the new library. These plans show that the group will be an important addition to the architectural beauty of the University of Chicago. In keeping with the general styles which has made Chicago the mecca of architects these new structures will reflect a wonderful consistency and at the same time the newest development and growth of that architecture which is made famous in Ryerson and the Tower group of buildings.

Dr. Ernest DeWitt Burton, chairman of the faculty committee on buildings and grounds recently gave in detail the proposed new library system. He said:

"As long ago as 1898 President Harper appointed a committee of the Senate to consider on the basis of the six years experience already had the educational questions connected with the library building, and from that day the problem of the library building has been under almost daily consideration in some one or more of the governing bodies of the University. The relatively large development of the departmental library system at the University makes the problem of a general library building a peculiarly difficult one. The ideal is that every departmental building shall have its own departmental library in close contact with lecture rooms and seminar rooms; and that all these departmental libraries shall be in close contact with the General Library, and with one another. With a view to realizing this impossible ideal as nearly as practicable the Board of Trustees in 1902 approved a plan by which the General Library was to be located on the Midway frontage of the main campus, half way between Ellis and Lexington Avenues, and connected with the departmental buildings of the Historical and Social Sciences, Philosophy, Law, Modern Languages, Classics, Oriental Languages and Theology, the whole constituting a splendid group of eight buildings with the library building itself as the commanding member of the whole."

The help of every student in the University of Chicago is needed for an early realization of this great plan. The united effort of the alumni associations all over the country is already making itself felt. The student body will be ready to express its loyalty by a hearty response to the call for subscriptions to the new William Rainey Harper Memorial Library.

IN MEM- ORIAM

Nicholas Senn
Heinrich Maschke

Professor Nicholas Senn

Nicholas Senn, M.D., Ph.D., LL.D., C. M., Professor of Surgery in the University of Chicago and in Rush Medical College, died at his home in Chicago, of chronic myocarditis and dilatation of the heart, January 2, 1908.

He was born in Buchs, Cautin Vall, Switzerland, October 31, 1844, and came to this country in 1852, with his parents. From the beginning of his practice in 1874 he spent much time in experimental work and his contributions to surgical science, embodied in a long series of monographs, mark an epoch in the history of American surgery, not only for their intrinsic value, but because they inspired many young men to take up investigation along similar lines. In large part his enduring fame will rest on the fact that he was the founder of experimental surgery in America.

He became professor of surgery in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago, in 1884, professor of the principles of surgery in Rush Medical College in 1888, and professor of the principles and practice of surgery, in the same institution, in 1892, on the death of Professor Parks. At this time he removed to Chicago, and began that remarkable series of clinical lectures which attracted students and practitioners from all parts of the world. It was his constant habit to work from sixteen to eighteen hours a day throughout his life. His clinics, conducted after an arduous forenoon of operating on private patients at the St. Joseph's Hospital, usually extended from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 7 or 8 in the evening, five or six hours of continuous operating and lecturing. The evenings far into the night and early morning were devoted to experimenting and writing, and the fruit of this unremitting toil, in addition to numerous papers and addresses, was some twenty volumes on surgical subjects.

Dr. Senn was especially interested in military surgery, rendered invaluable service to his country in the Spanish-American war, founded the American Association of Military Surgeons, and at least two state associations of similar character, was surgeon-general of the State of Wisconsin and later of Illinois. He gave nearly $100,000 to Rush Medical College, a magnificent collection of medical books to the Newberry Library, and many lesser gifts to other institutions.

He had been president of the American Medical Association, of the American Surgical Association, the American Association of Military Surgeons, and several other state and local societies. He was a member of numerous medical and scientific bodies throughout the world. He was elected Professor of Surgery in the University of Chicago in 1905.

Master surgeon, wise physician, great teacher, brilliant and fruitful investigator, prolific and forceful writer, extensive and observing traveler, generous benefactor to medical institutions—few men in its history have reflected so great honor upon the medical profession or attained such distinction as Nicholas Senn.

JOHN M. DODSON.

Professor Heinrich Maschke

For the first time in the sixteen years of its history the Department of Mathematics is called upon to mourn the loss by death of a member of its faculty. Ten days before his departure, Professor Maschke would have been considered the one least likely to be summoned. He had been in robust health, and was in the prime of his usefulness, when he was suddenly called upon to make a choice which would likely end his life at once, but which might save it. With great courage and remarkable composure he met the crisis and succumbed to the inevitable.

Professor Maschke was born in Breslau, Germany, in 1853. His university training was in Breslau, Heidelberg, Berlin and Göttingen. After receiving the doctor's degree in Göttingen in 1880, he taught for ten years in Suisenstädische Gymnasium of Berlin, and with the opening of the University of Chicago in 1892, he became Assistant Professor of Mathematics in the new institution. In 1896 he was promoted to the rank of Associate Professor, and in 1906, to the full professorship. Professor Maschke was well known both in this country and abroad as a scholar of high rank in the line of his chosen specialty, and his contributions to scientific literature are numerous and constructively effective.

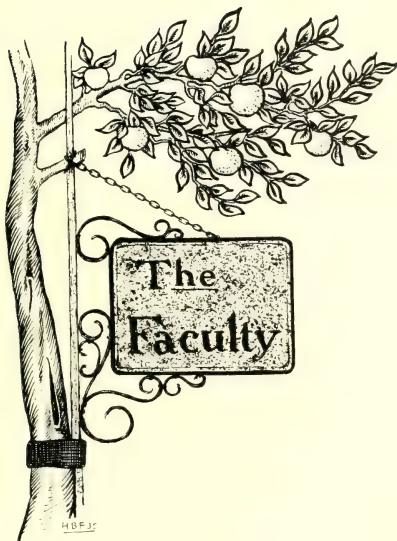

A certain personal charm endeared Professor Maschke to his students, his colleagues and his friends. This cannot be adequately described in a few words, but here are some of the elements which entered into his unique personality:—A genuine courtesy which led him always to consider the rights and feelings of others; a keen sympathy which led him to appreciate the standpoint of another, whether a student in difficulty or a colleague on the opposite side of the question; an artistic sense, manifested in his love of music and his appreciation of the beautiful in whatever form; a devotion to the scientific spirit, which led him to be satisfied with nothing short of his best and highest endeavor in whatever occupied his attention; and finally a devotion to his friends and especially to his chosen helpmate which was beautiful in its simplicity and its sincerity.

Activities of

The Classes

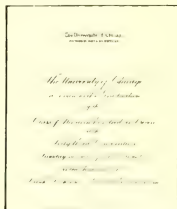

As They Go Marching On

WHEN the chimes ring out from Mitchell tower this June, another great class passes into every activity of modern life. The sixty-seventh convocation of the University of Chicago is another memorable occasion in the building up of a great institution. The presence of Professor George Herbert Palmer of Harvard University, as the convocation orator is a reminder of the work done by a noble woman, Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, in what Chicago people love to speak of as "early days." It recalls the fields of waving golden rod and the lanes of scrub oaks; the swampy road overgrown with grasses and wild shrubbery, long since obliterated by the coming of the City Gray. As convocation follows convocation, and class succeeds class, the spirit of Chicago goes out like a great ripple on a water—a great circle of hearty interest spreading wider and wider into every land and among every people.

The sixty-sixth convocation was held on March 17, 1908, in Leon Mandel Assembly Hall. The address was delivered by Andrew Sloan Draper, commissioner of education for the state of New York, who spoke on the subject, "The Rational Limits of Academic Freedom." The title of associate was awarded to thirty-four candidates; six received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, twenty-four the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy and six the degree of Bachelor of Science. There were eight elections to Phi Beta Kappa and nine to Sigma Xi. Honorable mention for excellence in the work of the Junior colleges was awarded to eight and in the Senior colleges to seventeen.

The sixty-fifth convocation, held in Leon Mandel Assembly Hall on December 17, 1907, was notable for the address by Professor William Henry Welch, M.D., LL.D., Professor of Pathology in Johns Hopkins University. His subject was, "Medicine and the University." Six received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, seventeen the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy and twenty the degree of Bachelor of Science. Forty-one candidates took the title of associate. Twenty-four members of the Senior colleges were elected to Sigma Xi and eleven to Phi Beta Kappa. Honorable mention was awarded to twelve in the Junior colleges and sixteen in the Senior colleges.

At the summer convocation, on August 30, 1907, Walter Hines Page made his address on "The Writer and the University," which started a discussion on the ability of schools to train practical writers. Twenty degrees of Bachelor of Arts were awarded, forty degrees of Bachelor of Philosophy and eighteen of Bachelor of Science. Fifteen titles of associate were given. Honorable mention was extended to two in the Junior colleges and eleven in the Senior colleges.

The sixty-third convocation must always be of interest for the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Laws upon the Right Honorable James Bryce, ambassador from Great Britain to the United States. Mr. Bryce gave the convocation address, speaking on "What University Instruction May Do to Provide Intellectual Pleasures for Later Life."

The award of honors followed the address. Twenty-six students received honorable mention for work in the Junior colleges, forty-six for work in the Senior colleges. Sixteen members were elected to the Beta of Illinois Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

Of the candidates for Bachelor degrees, twenty-seven took the degree of Bachelor of Arts, one hundred and four the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy, twenty-nine the degree of Bachelor of Science and seventeen the degree of Bachelor of Education. There were ninety-one candidates for the title of associate.

This convocation was without doubt the most impressive ever held in the University of Chicago. On account of the large demand for tickets the exercises were early announced for Bartlett gymnasium, the seating capacity of Mandel hall being inadequate for the crowds. The day was ideal. Spectators who gathered along the walks will long remember the rows of candidates for degrees filing out of the corridor of Mitchell tower and into the spacious gymnasium; the black academic gowns marking a wonderful contrast to the white dresses of the women. Impressive too, was the scene in the Bartlett gymnasium. Here the faculty sat in a great semi-circle on the newly erected platform; the candidates for degrees, arranged in order of seniority, occupied the fore part of the auditorium; behind them were massed the thousands who had come to witness this, the greatest annual event in the University of Chicago.

The bells ring out again this June, telling their story of the progression—another, newer, larger class passing from the doors of the University. Again the year has been one of growth and progress and as the well-wisher looks forward into those years when classes unnumbered shall pass out as these classes pass, he can see nothing but a large growth, a more profound accomplishment of the University's aims; a more successful realization of the University ideal.

The Class of 1908

THAT the Senior class of the University will leave behind it the example of a compact, coherent organization seems certain as plans for the final Convocation celebrations progress. Not only will the class have set a good example by acting quickly and in unison but it will have revived many of those customs which make so impressive a week of the last seven days of school in older Universities.

To show that the class is a unit its members decided early in the year to sit together in Senior college chapel; to wear the cap and gown on Senior day, and to march around the campus to say farewell to every building as a last tribute. The class gift committee is making considerable progress and the class day committee has prepared a program of exceptional merit.

The pin committee this year decided on a different style of pin from that used by the Class of 1907, agreeing on a small square button bearing the class numerals and the name of the University.

Three class dances were given during the year, the final social event being held in the Reynolds club on May 13. Each dance was decidedly successful. Informal plans prevailed, the idea urged by the committee in charge being to get the members of the big organization acquainted with each other.

The programs are neatly bound in leather and are illustrated with engravings of prominent University buildings.

Convocation exercises include the Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, June 7, in Mandel hall. The Convocation exercises proper take place on Tuesday, June 9. Senior day will see a repetition of those class exercises that have come to mean so much to University of Chicago Seniors: the class play, the class oration, the handing down of the Senior bench and the Senior hammer. On that day too the flag of the Senior class will fly from the tall pole in the center of the main campus, marking the passing of another class from the field of University activities.

The Class of 1909

THE class of 1909 has two distinctions that must for all time be recorded in its annals. First, it furnishes the brains and—what is more important—the cash for the publication of the Cap and Gown; second, it has Harvey Meagher as its treasurer. Harvey Meagher is the man with the adjustable name, the smile that it is beyond the invention of man to eradicate, and the treasury of the Junior class. In company with Bill MacCracken, Wince Henry, Rens Sherer and other lights, he engineered the smoker of the class so well that this body has not given any since. This occurred some time in the Winter quarter, on the same night when the girls had a feed in Lex, and Paul Harper took three girls home because there were enough to go around.

The class is proud of the fact that it has Fred Carr for its president, and its members greatly regretted his absence in the winter quarter, caused by illness. With a large and enthusiastic body of members, many of them the best workers among the undergraduates, the class looks forward to a record year in 1909, when it steps into its place as the Senior class.

The Class of 1910

THE cares of the Sophomore class in the University of Chicago have to do largely with the saying that coming events cast their shadows before. During the Sophomore year preparations are made for the election of a Cap and Gown board, the Junior Promenade comes with its share of responsibilities and honors and Junior day adds to the sphere of activities. While the men of the first two years are included in these events the burden of the work falls on the Sophomores.

The present Sophomore class completes an active year, full of importance to its members. The Junior Promenade on June 5 is the last big social activity in which Sophomores engage. Junior day during Convocation week will be the final event of the year.

The Class of 1911

JUST when the class of 1911 sprang into being is not a matter of record. As far as the general student body is concerned, the class got together one day in Kent Theater, elected officers and appointed a social committee right after the deans declared that the Freshman class did not exist in the University of Chicago. President Smith did not seem to be bothered by the fact that there was no class—as he says there seemed to be enough votes for the opposing candidates to place him on the anxious seat for a while. Neither did this bother the gay crowd that gathered on February 11 at the Reynolds Club for the first real Freshman dance.

This dance was without question a success. The chaperones were Dean and Mrs. R. M. Lovett, Dean and Mrs. F. J. Miller, Miss Marion Talbot and Mr. Julian P. Bretz. The committee in charge was composed of the following:

Harold Smith, Hargrave Long, Dorothy Buckley, Morris Briggs, Alec Whitfield, Ralph Lidster, George Roulston, Charles Sullivan, Robert Owen, Ned Earle, John Scott, Jeanette Thielens, Virginia Freeman, Katharine Johnston, Mary Chaney, Fred Bate, Percival Gottfried, Paul Gardner, Joy Clark, Raymond Madden, Greta Hole, Helen Alling, Edith Young, Bernice Le Claire, Theo Leonard, Margaret MacCracken, Ethel Kawin and Elizabeth Burke.

THE ACTIVITIES OF THE COLLEGES

The Senior College Council

SINCE its organization in 1905 the council system has expanded until to-day it stands as the court of last resort in student activities. By virtue of being representative of the upper two years of undergraduate life the Senior College Council is naturally of first importance. Since the spring of 1907 the council has initiated a new plan for elections, means for relieving the congestion in Cobb Hall and has improved conditions in Lexington Commons. The fall quarter was a busy one, resulting in the conduct of football mass-meetings, plans for celebrations, and a consideration of demonstrations, vaccination, and other questions. In the winter the council endorsed the Blackfriars' plan for a trip outside of Chicago, arranged for a successful Washington Prom, adopted a design for an official university pin and discussed other matters of importance to students.

Council members are elected from the six divisions of the Senior colleges, one representative being chosen every quarter. Each member serves two quarters. An important part of the work of the Senior college council is to conduct the elections in the Junior and Senior classes. The Senior college council, too, is the only undergraduate body that has regular meetings with President Judson. On such occasions plans for the betterment of student interests are discussed.

MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL.

Winter Quarter, 1908.—William Embry Wrather, president; William Patterson MacCracken, vice-president; Frances Catherine Baker, secretary; Florence Jeanette Chaney, Harriett Grim, Ruth Marion Kellogg, Harry Winfred Harriman, Harry Arthur Hansen, Norman Barker, Henry Rowland Halsey, Paul Peter Princell.

Autumn Quarter, 1907.—Harry Winfred Harriman, president; Ivy Hunter Dodge, secretary; Alvin Frederick Kramer, Frank Samuel Bevan, Hugo Frank Bezdek, Harriett Grim, Henry Rowland Halsey, Harry Arthur Hansen, William Francis Hewitt, Elton James Moulton, Edith Shope Reider, William Embry Wrather.

Summer Quarter, 1907.—Frank Samuel Bevan, president; Elton James Moulton, secretary; Hugo Frank Bezdek, Ivy Hunter Dodge, Alvin Frederick Kramer, Edith Shope Reider.

The Junior College Council

THE Junior College Council, composed of eight representatives elected bi-quarterly from the Junior Colleges of Arts, Literature, Science and Philosophy, has developed important functions. The two most important functions of the council, however, are to act on matters of student interest and to serve as a medium between students and faculty. Such acts as bringing to the notice of the proper authorities the need of better sidewalks, better lighting facilities, clocks, mirrors and other small accommodations, seemingly unessential but nevertheless important to the welfare of the student body, constitute no small contribution to the general life, and are worthy of recognition. Matters of greater interest to the students, such as the selection of college seal and pin, the election of officers for Junior day and the Promenade, the suggestion of changes in the curriculum, have been treated effectively and with care. With much already accomplished, the council is only in the initial stage of its sphere of usefulness.

In the Spring quarter the Junior College Council acts as an auditing committee for the Junior Promenade. The records of Junior day activities are kept, the Council having supervision over the entire event. Since the adoption of the new constitution of the Junior Colleges the members of the Council hold no other office within their college, but are responsible to the executive committees and receive instructions from their colleges through this medium.

MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL.

Winter Quarter, 1908.—Albert Dean Henderson, president; Willowdean Chatterton, secretary; Bradford Gill, Raymond Deforest Penney, Edith Prindeville, Allen Sayles, Katharine Slaughter, Clara Bertha Spohn.

Autumn Quarter, 1907.—Albert Dean Henderson, president; Ruth Marion Kellogg, secretary; Mary Lillian Kenney, Willowdean Chatterton, Katharine May Slaughter, David Francis David, Raymond Deforest Penney, Robert Brent Sullivan.

Spring Quarter, 1907.—Harry Arthur Hansen, president; Marjorie Day, secretary; Fred Cornelius Caldwell, David Francis Davis, Mary Lillian Kenney, Bernard Herman Krog, Edith Whitten Osgood, Ethel Preston.

The College of Arts---Men

ARTS college of men will never face the charge of being an unwieldy body. In the last few years its membership has never gone far above the thirty mark, which has given its meetings an informal character and made things easy for its chairman.

Its size has not, however, limited the activities of its members. The social calendar included a smoker at the Reynolds Club and several dances. In the inter-college basketball relations the Arts team worked hard and while it did not land very high its members were satisfied with the effort. The team was built around Exselsen and Leaf and was composed of these two men and Wolfram, Gilbert and Luckenbill. Several games went by the narrowest of margins—games hard to lose. The prospects for next year are very bright.

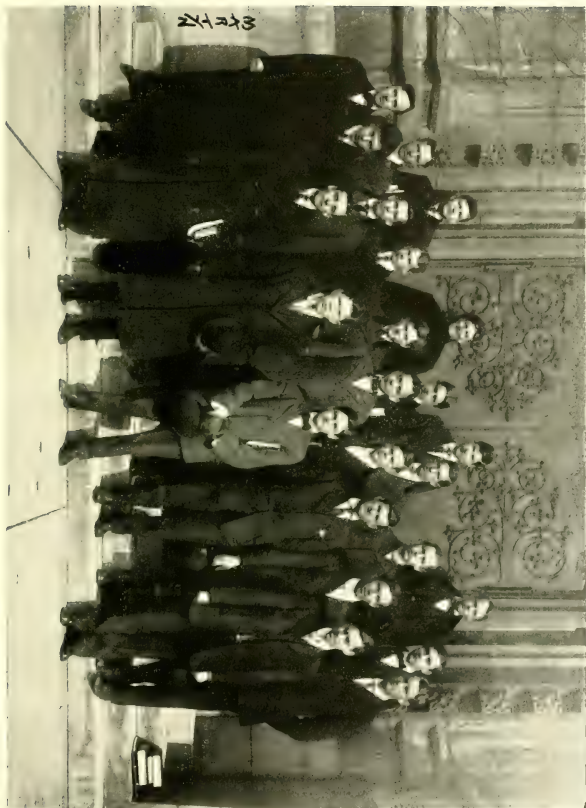

Arts is also active in debating this year. Last year the team, Frank Putnam and Sayles, won the Junior College championship in debating and this year's team is out for it again. The debaters this year are Carpenter, Gilbert and Sayles. Fichman could not serve and Gilbert, the alternate, took his place. Arts meets Philosophy first while Literature debates Science. The winners of these matches then contest in the finals.

A large number of Arts men have won honors in various activities. Kling and Morgan are members of the Varsity cross-country and track teams. Wolfram won the Winter quarter finals in public speaking. Carpenter made the Freshman debating team which met Northwestern's freshmen this spring, and Sayles was elected president of the Junior College Council for the spring quarter.

The college officers and committees are:

Winter quarter, 1908—Paul L. V. Exselsen, chairman; Allen Sayles, councilor; Syrene Leaf, Leroy A. Kling, Freeman Morgan.

Autumn quarter, 1907—Paul L. V. Exselsen, chairman; David F. Davis, councilor; Syrene Leaf, Freeman Morgan, Allen Sayles.

The College of Arts--Women

BY all other colleges Arts women are regarded as artistic and exclusive. Arts women are perfectly satisfied with the first appellation, but object to any exclusiveness, in spite of the fact that they have a better knowledge of the Classical library than less favored folk. They also assert that in spite of the fact that they consort with Cicero, Livy and Xenophon, they are not to be regarded as dead ones, and point to a very lively social calendar as proof positive of their usefulness in the Junior College scheme of entertainment.

Socially, Arts women have been very active. Almost every Friday there has been something doing. Arts women meet in their college room for luncheons in order to get better acquainted and to talk shop. There was a dance in Foster Hall on November 8, and a chocolate party in the Arts room on November 15. On December 6 the college dressed dolls for the Tuskegee Institute. A Christmas party was held on December 13, and a Valentine cotillion in Lexington hall for Arts and Science College.

The following special addresses have been given to Arts College women during the year:

October 22.—Mrs. William MacClintock—"Making a Friend."

November 19.—Mrs. Krehbiel—"Graduate Work."

November 22.—Miss Cushman—"Where to Find Places of Artistic Interest in Chicago."

December 3.—Dr. Bonner—"Greek Athletics."

January 17.—Prof. Shorey—"Interesting Facts About Greek."

November 12.—Mr. Robertson—"History of the University," in Kent Theater.

January 14, February 25 and March 3.—Dean Vincent.

Arts College has the following officers:

Myra Nugent, president; Ina Rabo, secretary-treasurer; Alice Johnson, chairman program committee; Marguerite Beeson, chairman room committee.

Executive Committee, Winter Quarter.—Edith Prindeville, chairman; Lucile Jarvis, Helen Riggs, Beulah Reed, Abigail Lazelle.

Executive Committee, Autumn Quarter.—Ruth Kellogg, chairman; Lucile Jarvis, Bessie Barker, Helen Riggs, Mary Clarke.

The College of Literature---Men

IT took Literature College three years to gather sufficient energy to give a dance but when it was given it was worth waiting for. It was a leap-year cotillion held on St. Valentine's day at the Reynold's Club in the face of the bitterest opposition from the men of Science and Arts who started a rival affair over in Lexington. Lit always claimed Science and Arts were jealous and laid a deep, dark, unholy conspiracy to get even. Anyhow the casualties were slight and several stunts new to the college dance were carried through.

The smoker the fall before was even more novel. For fear that the theater of the Reynolds Club would not be large enough to hold all the guests whom they had invited none of the men of Lit came. The guests, likewise most courteous, must have felt the same scruples. Mr. Robertson's aggregation of after-dinner speakers, after having performed their parts in the dining room of Hutchinson below, all came in a body and saved the day. Besides admiring the handiwork of a sporting cartoonist of The Daily News, the audience was victimized by the humor of one Bob Harris. The Snell Hall collection of wit—the greatest and most unique in captivity, was also presented to view by Ivan Doseff.

In 1907 Lit won the college basketball championship. In 1908, Lit struggled equally hard with Arts to see which would have the honor of bringing up the rear of the procession.

Particular pains were taken during the Winter quarter to encourage the intellectual processes of the men. A number of the scientific members of the faculty presented to them their estimate of the position of science as a whole and in various phases in the general scheme of things.

An illustrated lecture—asserted to have been the first ever given by a college independently, was delivered, Mr. David A. Robertson being the speaker.

The officers were:

Winter Quarter, 1908. Warren Dunham Foster, Chairman; Raymond Deforest Penney, co-cilior; Aleck Whitfield, Ben Newman, Jerome Frank.

Autumn Quarter, 1907. Ben Franklin Newman, chairman; Raymond Deforest Penney, co-cilior; Lester A. Stern, Warren D. Foster, Arthur Kay Wilson.

The College of Literature---Women

LITERATURE women are responsible for many recent innovations in the programs of the Junior Colleges. They assert that they started the combination meetings of the Junior women, at which Hamlin Garland, Dean George E. Vincent and others spoke. Under the leadership of Miss Elizabeth Wallace they have preserved a spirit of unity hardly looked for in so large an organization, for Literature College has more members than any other woman's college.

Literature women have been leaders in the informal parties of the last year, having given dances, costume affairs, theatricals and weekly luncheons. Athletics also have not been ignored, and the results have been very gratifying. The Greenroom is a dramatic club composed of Literature women.

During the Autumn quarter the college gave a dance on November 5 and a college luncheon on November 27. Another big luncheon took place January 9. The Winter quarter dance was given January 22 at the Reynolds Club. On March 11 the college gave a luncheon to Mrs. Flint.

Speakers for the College of Literature in the Spring quarter of 1907 were: Miss Breckenridge, Dean Barnes, Mr. Boynton, Miss Montgomery, Mr. Nelson and Lorado Taft. In the Autumn quarter, 1908, they were: Vida Sutton, Mrs. Elia W. Peattie, David A. Robertson, Miss Wallace and Prof. C. E. Merriam. Speakers in the Winter quarter were: Dean Vincent, Mrs. Vincent, Miss Talbot, Hamlin Garland and Katherine Coman of Wellesley.

The organization of the college has been as follows:

Winter Quarter.—Jessie Heckman, chairman; Katherine Slaughter, counselor; Caroline Dickey, secretary; Dorothy Buckley, Mildred Dana, Mary Phister, Miss Hartwell, Florence Lawson, Ruth Allen, Eva Schultz.

Autumn Quarter.—Katherine Slaughter, chairman and counselor; Caroline Dickey, secretary; Jessie Heckman, Mary Phister, Dorothy Buckley, Mildred Dana, Hartwell, Ruth Allen, Florence Lawson.

The College of Philosophy--Men

PHILOSOPHY has always had the distinction of being the largest of the men's Junior Colleges. One of the reasons for its size is believed to be the fact that it embraces men who are training for large fields like that of law, business, newspaper work, banking and others allied with trade and industry.

For this reason the speakers at Philosophy meetings have aimed to present topics of especial value in the business and commercial fields. Among those who have addressed the college during the year have been Professors Laughlin, Salisbury, Vincent, Zueblin, Merriam, Clark, Blanchard, Moulton and others representing nine departments.

Some of the lectures given for the college have been illustrated with stereopticon slides, this being made possible by the fact that Kent Theater, the meeting place of the college, is completely wired. Professor J. Paul Goode spoke on the resources of the great West on one occasion, illustrating his talk with maps and photographs.

Philosophy college has always ranked high in inter-college contests. On last Junior day, with a track team made up of Worthwine, D. W. Ferguson, Wertz, Friedstein, I. E. Ferguson, Tait, Adams, Bebb, Resnick, Silberman, Anderson, Merriam, Bliss, Kahn and Donovan the college won the championship banner. In basketball the college ranked second, taking first last year. On this year's team were Sabath, captain; Allison, Ferguson, Ford, Herger and Levinson. In debate the college is represented by Sabath, Saulkey and Keyes.

The officers and committee men of the college are:

Winter quarter, 1908--Albert C. Donovan, chairman; Albert D. Henderson, counselor; Robert Allison, Ralph M. Cleary, Robert J. Hart, Carlyle M. Keyes, John W. MacNeish, Harvey E. Meagher, and Albert Sabath.

Autumn quarter, 1907--Albert D. Henderson, chairman and counselor; Robert Allison, Benjamin H. Badenoch, Carlyle M. Keyes, Harvey E. Meagher and Frank J. O'Brien.

The College of Philosophy --- Women

THEY say that if any one college keeps things moving in the group of women's Junior colleges—it's Philosophy. Philosophy has been pushing ahead ever since it became famous as the place where the Sock and Buskin society holds its secret conclave. The young women who plan its dramatic entertainments have long been suspected of being the main works behind the affairs of Philosophy.

The social calendar of Philosophy has been very full. So has the calendar of general events. These explain better than a long description the activities of this particular group. The secretary's record gives the following:

- Oct. 8—Election of officers.
- Oct. 15—Dean MacClintock addresses the college.
- Oct. 22—Addresses by representatives of the different committees on student activities.
- Oct. 23—Harvest Home party in Lexington.
- Oct. 29—College assembled and vaccinated.
- Nov. 5—Prof. Clark's readings illustrative of the "Music Element in Lyric Poetry."
- Nov. 12—Lecture in Kent by Mr. David A. Robertson, on the University.
- Nov. 19—Business Meeting with Dean MacClintock.
- Nov. 22—College entertained the men of Philosophy College at an informal afternoon dance Reynolds Club.
- Nov. 26—James O'Donnell Bennett on "How To See A Play," Kent Theater.
- Dec. 3—Dean Vincent on a "Trip Through the East."
- Dec. 7—The college was entertained by Philosophy men at an informal, Reynolds Club.
- Dec. 11—The Junior College declamation contest in Mandel.
- Dec. 12—"Children's Christmas Party" in Lexington Hall.

WINTER QUARTER, 1908

- Autumn quarter, 1907—Willowdeen Chaterson, chairman, Mildred Chamberlain, secretary and treasurer, Gertrude C. Fish, Sarah Wilkes, Ernestine Evans, and Marion Day.

The College of Science---Men

MASTERLY inactivity has characterized Science College men during the past year. In the spring of 1907 Science won the relay at the Junior Day meet, and so much energy was then consumed that none has been left for anything else. Science also won second place in that meet and the expansion of the grin of one Bradford Gill, who lately has attained the dignity of the council, or perhaps has had it thrust upon him, has never been below the maximum—and that is saying much.

Politics is unknown to the men of Science. At each election the dean or some other charitably-minded individual has had to use a prod to force enough nominations to fill the offices. Lit men have never believed this, but the Lit men are an unregenerate lot anyhow.

Lately Oswald Frithiof Nelson has presided over the destiny of the college. Notwithstanding his first names and the fact that he comes from Des Moines, Fritz has been able to control the fate of his trustful charges at least without great jar to their sensibilities—or much of anything else.

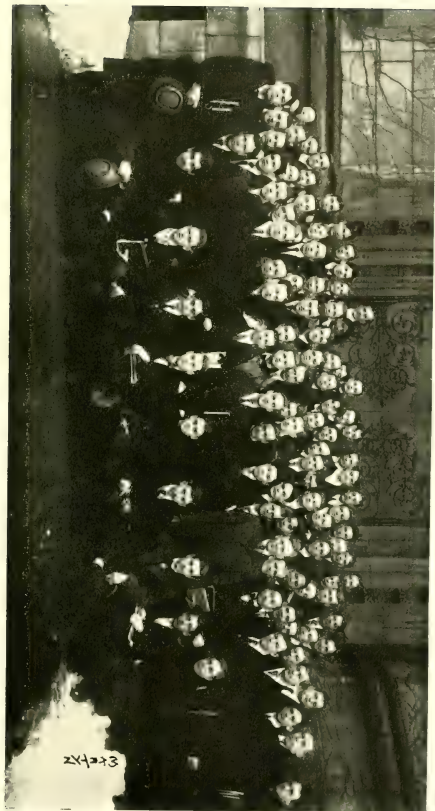

Social events have been conspicuous by their absence from the activities of the college. "What need have we for smokers and dances since we won the relay last spring?" say the men of Science. However, in the course of the first few weeks of the Spring quarter something is going to happen. Whether this happening will be an entrance into the world of inter-college society or preparation to win another relay at the next Junior Day meet or the formation of plans to capture second place, or, perhaps, even first, the men of the college will not disclose. Meanwhile the rest of the men of the Junior colleges wait in awesome suspense. What is going to happen? Will Science stir from its masterly lethargy? Will wild excitement break forth? What is developing in the mighty mind of Science?

Anyhow, Science won the basketball championship. What more do you want?

The rulers of the college have been:

Autumn Quarter, 1907. Robert B. Sullivan, chairman and counselor; Fred C. Caldwell, George H. Lindsay, Harlan O. Page, George H. Roulston, Leo C. De Trax.

Winter Quarter, 1908. Oswald F. Nelson, chairman; Bradford Gill, counselor; Leo C. De Trax, Charles L. Maxwell, George H. Roulston.

The College of Science---Women

TO think that, in all our varied career as an organization, we have never been formally presented to the University through the Cap and Gown; we, who are at present revising our charter; we, with alumnae to our credit; we, who are even now planning our third annual something or other. It seems an incredible oversight, since we are quite old enough to be an established tradition.

Not only are we an established tradition, but among ourselves, we have established traditions, which cover wide fields. For instance, once a quarter we give a reception to the Freshmen, which only Freshmen attend, decide to redecorate the electric lights with new yellow crepé paper, and devote one entire meeting to the betterment of our beloved University. At this meeting we decide any question which is weighing down the minds of the Faculty, such as, "How the Incoming Student Can Best Solve Her New Problems," "How the Student Body Can Be Better Housed and Fed," and "Which Side-Walk the Superintendent of Grounds Should Best Tear Up Next."

On the athletic side, we always feel it our duty to be represented on every final team, whether basketball, baseball or hockey, and to compete in the inter-college contest at least in the potato and sack races. No well regulated oratorical contest can get along without us; we are in demand all over the campus. You will find a fair share of us in English I. and III., we are in psychology, the trigonometry class teems with our members, and even in public speaking, Mr. Nelson insists on our presence.

But greater and more obligatory to every Science girl is "Busyness." What college can boast of laboratory hours from 8:30 to 6:00, of field-trips arranged for weeks ahead, and references piled up by the score? What college is there but ours in which every member can be recognized as far as the eye can reach, and whose whole life can be summed up in the simple word—Rush. We rush, but not in vain, for we get there.

In social events Science women have been active. A characteristic event was a sewing bee, held in the Spring quarter. An informal tea party also was on the list. The Faculty also has not been neglected.

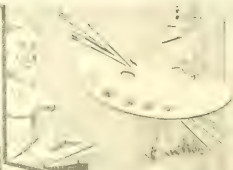

Science women have had the following officers:

Winter quarter: Carlie Souter, chairman; Ella Martin, secretary; Clara Spohn, comoder; Max Hull, Miriam Mathews, Charlotte Merrill.

Autumn quarter: Clara Spohn, chairman; Ella Martin, secretary; Mary Kenney, comoder; Carlie Souter, Max Roberts, Adelaide Klemminger, Myrtle McCoy.

Spring quarter, 1907: Marjorie Bell, chairman; Villa Smith, secretary; Mary Kenney, comoder; Adelaide Klemminger, Carlie Souter, Miss Gordon, Clara Spohn.

COLLEGE

EDUCATION:

BALDRIDGE

The College of Education

Although the ranking of the work is the same as any other branch of the undergraduate colleges in giving a bachelor's degree, the College of Education is so nearly isolated both in location and in aims that it is very little understood even by the University public. To a greater or less degree, students working for a B. Ed. do their work in Emmons Blaine Hall and see very little of the campus. In the mind of the ordinary undergraduate a very hazy notion is likely to exist as to what the general nature of the work may be. As he casually scans the quarterly schedule, questions are very likely to suggest themselves to him as to how the "Application of Heat to Food Material" can be any different from what he would expect to be taught under the title of "Cooking."

The aim of the College is to turn out efficient, capable teachers. The methods used to secure this end are a training in the psychological and social problems of the school room, and a training of the eye and hand by such work as basketry, pottery, metal working, and domestic science. The close connection with the Elementary School and Kindergarten affords an unusually good opportunity to do actual "laboratory work" in teaching. The incorporation of the College as a part of the University proper offers opportunities to do specialized work along certain lines which will be taken into account more and more by students generally.

REPORTERS DURING THE YEAR

A. L. Fridstein, Albert D. Henderson, Walter A. Ford, Miss Esdler Hall, Harvey B. Fuller, Jr., Fred W. Carr, W. A. Weaver, A. N. Pfeiffer, J. Sidney Salkey, Robert B. Owen, S. Bose, Miss Mamie Lilly, Miss Caroline Dickey, A. W. Wheeler, A. W. Whitfield, H. R. Baukhage.

"A twenty, often thirty and occasionally a forty column morning college journal, reaching practically everyone of the 5,000 students in the University, almost 1,000 alumni, 250 members of the faculty, 350 high schools and 100 other institutions of learning—this is The Daily Maroon of 1907-8. With a circulation that is 300 per cent greater than the circulation of 1906-7, with double the advertising patronage, it has more than succeeded in maintaining the place modestly attributed to it last year as 'the best news paper in the world of college journalism.'"

True, indeed, it is that this advertising talk of the business manager is enthusiastic, but it is not overdrawn. The advance of the Daily in the early part of 1907 produced and developed a general hearty sentiment in its favor on the campus, which is clearly indicated by the fact that at the very start of the present college year, the circulation of the preceding year was quadrupled. This extraordinary advance in circulation bringing, as it did, a live and well printed sheet, naturally had the healthy result of securing liberal advertising patronage—a result obtained in spite of a 25 per cent. increase of rate and an absolute refusal of considerable and profitable but doubtful advertising matter.

Following this auspicious beginning, the Daily continued to grow and by spring, six-page issues of 30 columns were required twice a week while special occasions called for eight-page issues to handle the increased amount of news and advertising. This marked growth of the Daily has been all the more remarkable in view of the financial stringency which cut off perhaps a thousand dollars of its most advantageous advertising patronage. While other publications were more or less influenced during this period, the Daily kept on without a break.

The complete and accurate handling of news in which the University public is interested has been of course, the prevailing source of pride to its editors. Not unlike its larger contemporaries in the city, in regard to its editorial management, the Daily has covered its news field thoroughly, consistently maintaining its claim as the official student publication. A good amount of journalistic ingenuity and foresight has not infrequently resulted in a generous "scooping" of the city dailies.

Among its readers the editorial influence of the Daily has been marked. In various cases where inaction on the part of those responsible has interfered with or delayed, University activities, the Daily has ably taken it upon itself to "start something." If a lack of authority prevents the calling of a mass meeting, it is the Daily that assumes the prerogative of calling and carrying out successful demonstrations. If it be that an athletic team is shirking its duty, it is the prod of the Daily's scorn that turns defeat into victory. If it be that a Varsity student cries out for aid for a thousand of his starving countrymen, it is again the Daily that stimulates its success of the most worthy cause.

A live range of news and an influential editorial treatment have not, however, meant sensationalism or radicalism. While the other papers of the west ranted on the conference situation, the Daily, consistent and conservative through it all, maintained a liberal attitude which proved the keynote of the student attitude that finally led to seven games and other improvements. Small pox scares, attempted suicides, inconsequential fires, petty scandals—"stories" of little value but of considerable journalistic promise—have conservatively been assigned merely the space and attention they deserved among the news which the University public wanted.

In addition to scouring the news field of University activities, the Daily of the past year has presented a great improvement in typographic appearance, resulting from a more careful and systematic supervision. Availing itself for the first time of the artists among the student body, the Daily has in the present school year, gained a unique reputation as a systematic publisher of cartoons, cleverly satirizing campus men and methods at the Midway. Owing to the continued activity of the campus photographer, the Daily has also been able to liven up its sheet with frequent pertinent illustrations of the "day's doings." Another valuable feature has been the numerous minor departments, taking care of the daily calendar, announcements, club and fraternity and other vital news.

Despite its setbacks, the past year's record for the Daily shows the largest circulation of any other college daily, the daily publication of from three to six columns more news than any college daily publication, the publication of more illustrations than all the other college publications put together, and an advertising patronage, surpassed, if at all, only by one or two of its older contemporaries in the East who have the distinct advantage of drawing liberally on alumni support.

The Organization of the Cap and Gown

VOLUME XIII of the Cap and Gown is the first book published by the Junior class in which all the plans embodied in the new constitution have been observed. These plans are an outgrowth of two years of effort on the part of the class to secure a system whereby the Cap and Gown might have its editors and managers chosen early enough to get a good start in the work for the new year.

The present editors of the Cap and Gown were chosen in May, 1907, as is prescribed in the constitution ratified by the Junior class sometime earlier in that year. Election day came the third Wednesday in May. This makes the Cap and Gown board in reality a body that is continuous and does not cease its activity the year around. The new board begins work with the old board still active and even before the new book is published.

Nominations for Cap and Gown positions are made in a caucus of the Junior class, called by the president, or by petitions signed by five members of the class.

The Cap and Gown board aims to have a permanent office in the near future. A place where records may be kept is indispensable. There are many articles, which can be prepared early in the school year. A place to preserve them, and an office in which to meet people and consult with them is needed to improve the organization of the book. The editors look forward to having a permanent home for the Annual in the next few years.

In the last two years the Annual has seen a steady improvement. There is no reason why this should not continue. The book, as a representative Chicago Annual is still in its embryonic stages. A great University with its manifold activities presents a wide field for editorial ingenuity. To depict this Chicago life is to portray something entirely different from the life of any other University. For that reason the Cap and Gown should stand apart from other annuals having its own distinct place as the representative book of the University of Chicago.

The old University of Chicago Weekly, the original student publication was revived in the Summer quarter of 1907, in a form unique in college journalism. To the characteristics of a national magazine, the new weekly added those of the rural newspaper. To articles of student interest presented by men of national prominence both within and without the University, items of local interest, of a nature personal enough to suit the tastes of the editor of the Hayslope Weekly Intelligencer were added. The first issue showed a collection of idiosyncracies of typography which would have put to shame even the Daily in its palmiest days; the remaining issues were virtually without mechanical error.

The following authorities wrote leading articles: Edgar T. Davies, Illinois factory inspector; James A. Woodburn of Indiana University; Dr. Charles R. Henderson; Abbe Felix Klein; Dr. Herbert L. Willett; W. L. Bodine, superintendent of compulsory education, Chicago; and W. M. R. French, director of the Art Institute. "Suez and Panama," a remarkable poem by President William W. Smith of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, was first published in the Weekly. "My Impressions," by Abbe Klein, a most unusual plea for toleration, created much interest both in America and France. The reports of his lectures and sermon were characterized by him as the most accurate in his experience. The article by Director French was well illustrated.

The local news field was adequately covered. The Weekly scored one of the greatest "beats" of college newspapers in publishing the first account of some of the most important results of the Egyptian expedition of Dr. Breasted. Accounts of the University's open lectures, such a promising field for journalistic freebooting, were given with accuracy and vigor.

Student literary efforts also found a place in the pages of the Weekly. Out of deference to the weather nothing of any very startling nature was presented but the quality of the matter equalled that of the average college literary magazine. Several studies of southern life were perhaps of the greatest interest.

The organization of the Weekly was on the same basis as that of any other University publication. According to the constitution granted by the Board of Control, the first board of associate editors and reporters was named by the managing editor, subject to the approval of Dean Robert Morss Lovett and Mr. David Allan Robertson.

What the Weekly thought that it had done was expressed in the last number in this form:

"After five summers have elapsed without a publication, The University of Chicago Weekly with this number makes its initial appearance as the official student publication of the University of Chicago for the Summer quarter of 1907. Many circumstances combine to render the publication of a student paper through the summer of the utmost difficulty, yet The University of Chicago Weekly enters the field confident that the students now in residence will recognize the need for the paper and respond adequately. The success or failure of the paper rests with the student body; if it takes an active, aggressive interest—if it manifests the true Chicago spirit, the Weekly will succeed; if not, it will fail."

Thus opened the leading editorial of the first number of this volume. The student body has taken an active, aggressive interest—it has manifested the true Chicago spirit, and as a consequence The University of Chicago Weekly has succeeded. That is all there is to it.

The last editorial of a managing editor is traditionally a wail of sorrow at the conclusion of his activity, but The University of Chicago Weekly believes that during the last three months it has shown itself superior enough to useless tradition to disregard this convention. The Weekly has nothing to be sorry for; it set out to do a definite thing and, having done it, can retire with satisfaction.

The Weekly has endeavored to fulfill its purpose as set forth in the constitution granted by the Board of Student Control and printed in the first issue. How adequately the field of University news has been covered is answered, it is believed, by the publication of such exclusive and authentic accounts as those of the discoveries of the Egyptian expedition of Dr. Breasted and the departure of the Cowles expedition. In matters of editorial policy, an aggressive attitude has been maintained for what was thought to have been the best interests of the University. Discussion of questions of vital interest to campus life has been provoked. It may be ill form for the Weekly thus to tell of what it has done, but the staff, tired from the hard work of the summer, may perhaps be pardoned for loquacity in the complacency of the successful conclusion of its labors. . . .

The University of Chicago Weekly now retires from the center of the stage to make way for the Daily Maroon, and again thanks the students of the Summer quarter of 1907 for their interest which has resulted in its success."

The Chicago Alumni Magazine

THE first volume of the Chicago Alumni Magazine has passed into history. It has seen this child of the Alumni Association at times submerged under almost over-powering difficulties, but in a certain sense it has been very good for both the alumni and the Alumni Association. It has served to point out in a very forcible way both the need of the Alumni Association for an organ of this sort and the need of the University for an active interested body of alumni who were constantly in touch with the life of the institution. The difficulties which beset this infant journal and the means by which they were overcome, serve to prove conclusively for all time that there are a number of alumni of the university whose loyalty is beyond reproach. This is a fact which had never been questioned and probably would have never been seriously doubted, but the exigencies of the past year have made numerous demonstrations of this fact, and also there is the further gratifying knowledge that a large body of alumni are willing to adhere to the movement with an abundance of faith in things unseen. It is believed that at least a portion of their faith has been justified, and that month by month their loyalty is being proved worth while.

During the past year a number of changes have been made upon the staff of the Magazine. The first undergraduate woman editor, Miss Helen Peck, '09, has been succeeded at her own request by Miss Esther Hall, '09. Fred Carr, '09, was forced to retire because of illness, and Harvey B. Fuller, Jr., '08 through pressure of other duties, handed in his resignation, to be succeeded by Albert D. Henderson, '09. Harry Arthur Hansen, '09, has continued in his position as associate editor throughout the year. The first business manager, Francis H. Welling, '09, upon leaving the University, was succeeded by Benjamin J. Wilk, the present incumbent.

The Magazine aims to be the one great literary and news publication devoted to the interests of the University at large. It is the official organ of the Alumni Association and of all affiliated and local clubs. It is also a great news medium through which the interests of every department and phase of the University life and work are carried month by month to alumni and friends of Chicago in all parts of the world. A new feature was developed during the course of the year in an undergraduate literary department. The undergraduate interest are also served in the monthly review of University and campus affairs, as well as in the general articles which appear regularly on matters of larger and more serious concern to the University and its alumni.

A number of special issues have appeared, notably the Law School number and the Old University number, while other special issues devoted to the School of Education, the Divinity School and the Medical School will appear shortly. Each month appear leading articles which discuss the important changes in the life and work of the University. In a word, the Magazine has been headed toward the ultimate goal of serving not only as the organ of the graduates, a very restricted field indeed, but as the great University monthly, gathering within its columns all of the important news of the University, its men and its women.

The Growth of the Alumni Association

"To advance the interests, influence and efficiency of the University of Chicago; to promote acquaintance among the graduates, and to strengthen the connection between the alumni and their Alma Mater by various publications, meetings and other means."

THE reorganized Alumni Association, which adopted the above quotation as the object of its existence, has passed through the first year of its history. In speculating upon the extent to which its aims have been realized, a number of things may be said, both in the way of developing old lines of activity and installing new features of alumni interest.

The alumni year was well inaugurated by a distinct departure in the conduct of Alumni Day, 1907. In originality of treatment and especially in its relief from the sombre dignity and heaviness of previous occasions, this celebration opened up the possibilities of the day as they had never before been entirely realized.

During the larger part of the first half year the effort to organize local alumni clubs in various sections of the country was given considerable attention, with the result that during the holidays and the month following, the president of the University himself spoke at seven alumni clubs in various parts of the country, Dean Lovett addressed another, and our friends in the Philippine Islands held a very successful preliminary meeting.

The operation of the Alumni Magazine, serving as the organ for all of the alumni groups, has demonstrated the desirability of one central alumni organization, with subsidiary groups under special secretaries to take care of the special group interests. There certainly are a number of interests, which these several bodies have in common, which would well justify the organizations like those of the Doctors of Philosophy and Divinity Graduates in seeking to regulate and develop through some central demonstration.

So far as the internal workings of the association are concerned, it is believed that a change in the annual dues to $2.00 per year, thereby making the change conform with the annual subscription rate of the Magazine, which in turn includes the alumni dues, would further simplify matters.

The association hopes to secure at a date not far in the future a central meeting place for all alumni of the University, a location for the alumni library, class memorabilia, records and pictures. But its strongest effort at the present time is being made to build up the association, and to include in its membership all graduates of the University.

Sure-Enough Segregation

AT the drop of the curtain they all said 'twas truly the best production of the Blackfriars. So thought the audiences on those memorable evenings, May 10 and 11, 1907, when "Sure Enough Segregation" passed into history. How they laughed at the witticisms and take-offs, at the clever repartee, at the eccentric comedy of Harold Swift, who was the lovelorn and impecunious Monsieur Beaucoup, and at Bernard I. Bell, who played the incomparable Professor Gazer; how they hummed with the soloists the catchy refrains of "Pretty Little Co-ed" and "My Sweet Old Brier," and lastly, how they walked out of the theater with the rhythmic thump, thump, thump, of "The Man Who Wears the C" in their hearts—all that has long ago been inscribed on the Blackfriar annals.

"Sure Enough Segregation" marked the beginning of a new period of development in the Blackfriars. The first was that of the Founders, in which Adams, Flavin and Gregory guided the infant craft over the storm-beset histrionic seas. With the competition of 1907 came another generation—the playwriting firm of Hansen and Klein, destined to usher in new ideas in Blackfriar comic opera. Their predecessors had gone to far-off lands for their themes; Hansen and Klein stopped close at home, made Lake Geneva their scene and developed a campus story, filled with local allusions and characteristic Chicago life.

In the cast, too, many of the names were new to fame. Beck Herdman as "Spuds" Allen, the athlete who wears the "C"; Howard Blackford as the quiet and retiring Mrs. Greenwad, and Winston Henry as the tittering, blushing heroine, were distinct Blackfriar acquisitions. Paul Harper was sweetness itself as Pêche, the little Parisienne, and June Chandler, "promoted from the chorus," made up so well that somebody entered his picture in the Tribune beauty contest. Adolph Pierrot was there, too, in his own eccentric comedy role, and Artie Bovee sang and acted so sweetly that his encores wore out the pony ballet.

The musical direction of the play was, as before, in the hands of Earle Scott Smith, whose fame will long be sung around the Blackfriar banquet table. Again he wielded the baton, and drilled the choruses with his old-time care. Max Richards made a very capable manager and found a fairly good counterpart of the billows at Lake Geneva in some prop. room down town. They do say, too, that Bartley Cushing smiled once, and thought the boys did well, considering the fact that they were young, that it was May and that it looked like rain in El Paso, Texas.

The story of "Sure Enough Segregation" was easy enough for the most callous theater-goer to digest. It dealt with the University, with Paris, with athletics, society and everything else that could have any bearing whatever on University life. If anything was overlooked it was only because the show had to be concluded some time before midnight. In detail it told of the trip of Monsieur Merci Beaucoup to the summer camp of the University of Chicago at Williams Bay, Lake Geneva, Wis. Monsieur Beaucoup arrived without money and two Parisian coeds on his hands; he fell in love with the heroine and got into trouble with the hero for his pains. At the end of the first act "Spuds" Allen was beside himself with jealousy, Monsieur Beaucoup had been ducked in the lake; Willie Green had won Clarice Gazer from under the watchful eyes of the scheming sophomores and Mrs. Greenwad was ready to transfer her youthful affections to whoever would share her sorrow. In spite of these complications each character had managed to unload some fifty-seven odd varieties of puns, roasts, grinds and general knocks that exhausted the supply of the Daily Maroon and left the Senior College Council without anything to kick about for a week.

"Sure Enough Segregation" was chosen in a hot play competition that called out some of the best efforts of the Blackfriar authors. The judging committee read the manuscripts several times and had special audiences with the authors and composers, who played their music and explained their books. The material offered was better than ever before presented to a judging committee. Books, lyrics and music, in complete form, were demanded by the Blackfriar play committee, and when the final day arrived the judges found three complete plays ready, and any number of plot suggestions and immature plans on hand. The judging committee was composed of Charles Jordan, Harold Swift, P. W. Pinkerton, William Hewitt and Bartley Cushing.

THE KNIGHT OF THE BURNING PESTLE

DESERTING the modern muse and retreating to the realm of the Elizabethan drama, the Dramatic Club chose for the Winter quarter production, Beaumont & Fletcher's amusing comedy, "The Knight of the Burning Pestle." At first there was doubt in the minds of some whether Elizabethan comedy would be comedy to a modern audience. With the progression of the rehearsals, however, all such dismal forebodings vanished, as under Mr. Robertson's skillful direction the ridiculous situations and amusing characters were well developed.

The original story of the play which deals with the turbulent love affair of Jasper and Luse is augmented by a second story of a grocer, who at the request of his master and mistress in the audience, enters the cast in the character of the Knight of the Burning Pestle. His amusing conflicts with the other characters and wrongly placed sympathy and the absurdly ignorant criticism of the grocer and his wife furnish great opportunity for rollicking wit.

In a note on the program the audience's attention was called to the fact that the performance was not a revival, the club merely aiming to suggest the British theater in which "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" was first played.

The title rôle was taken by Ralph Benzies. This part of the mock-heroic errand, that always dangerous style or caricature and burlesque, Benzies took with careful discrimination. He kept the audience laughing and at the same time maintained a safe distance from the slap stick.

Arthur Bruce gave an excellent piece of character acting as the citizen and with the splendid work of the wife, done by Miss Harriett Grim, produced no end of merriment. Frank Shackleford carried the one heavy part of Venturewell, the choleric merchant, in a very creditable manner. Karl Dixon in the part of the brainless Lord Humphrey gave a well rounded delineation of this mirth-provoking character, consistently maintaining it through the most ludicrous situations. Merrythought was given a remarkable characterization by Hilmar Baukhage, who played the part with such abandon as to bring roars of laughter time and again. Jasper, the one

"straight" part and the lover, was capably handled by Douglas Scott. With careful enunciation and a dignified fervor he courted and won his lady to the satisfaction of "all the world." Michael, the younger brother of Jaspar, was creditably played by Paul Harper in an original and satisfactory manner. He gave an original and thoroughly creditable rendition of the part of the stupid goody-goody.

Luce, the beloved, was played by Miss Inez Jackson. Sweet and happy through the pleasant lines, she was equally good where sober action was called for, and from first to last she "got over" the footlights and kept the audience in thorough sympathy with the heroine. Miss Phebe Bell played the spit-fire wife of Merrythought. This work, quite a departure from anything that Miss Bell has been seen in before, furnished opportunity for proving her versatility. The Pomponia, the Princess Beautiful, was portrayed by Miss Esther Hall. "Beautiful" quite characterizes Miss Hall in this part. Tim, the Squire, and George, the dwarf, were played by Albert Henderson and Herschel Shaw respectively, who together were accountable for much of the hilarity of the evening. Henderson was also seen as the Speaker of the Prologue and rendered the introduction with dignity and skill. Renslow Sherer, as the Boy, was not very much in evidence, but his work as "the man behind" was felt and appreciated. The second Boy, played by Paul Davis, also a small part, was well handled and brought out deserved praise.

The Schoolmistress

WEDNESDAY

MOST successful was the presentation of Arthur Wing Pinero's "The Schoolmistress," by the Dramatic Club on Junior Day, June 7, 1907. Those present will long remember the pure fun produced by the excellent characterizations of Admiral Rankling, by James Hickey, and Vere Queckett, by Bernard I. Bell. Howard Woodhead made much of the rôle of Tyler, and Harold Swift was excellent as Lieutenant Melloy. Adolph Pierrot played two parts with credit to himself, especially awakening the risibilities of the audience in the rôle of the eccentric Mr. Bernstein. Miss Phebe Bell appeared to good advantage as Peggy, while Miss Mary Johnson and Miss Ruth Porter carried the two character parts admirably. The dinner scene in the second act was a laugh from one end to the other, demonstrating Pinero's command of farce as well as more serious forms of drama. The complete cast was as follows:

Hon. Vere Queckett	BERNARD I. BELL
Miss Dyott	RUTH PORTER
Rear Admiral Rankling	JAMES HICKEY
Mrs. Rankling	MARY JOHNSON

ummers

THE chief object of the Mummers is to make life hard for the men who sit in the offices of Klaw & Erlanger, David Belasco and other producers, reading unsolicited plays. In order to accomplish their end they dissect such masters of dramatic technique as have shown themselves worthy of emulation. The club owes its existence largely to the enthusiasm of Fred Carr and Melvin Adams, who inveigled Pinkerton, Klein and Hansen into their plans and gave them the playwrighting germ. Under the leadership of Dr. Martin Schutze of the German department, the members have studied the methods of Ibsen, Shaw, and Oscar Wilde, with a view to obtaining a knowledge of practical stagecraft. IN the Blackfriar plays women's parts are taken by men. In the musical comedy and vaudeville sketches of the Sock and Buskin club girls are cast for all male parts. In this the club has been markedly successful. Its plays and sketches have pleased immensely. Most of these were prepared by the members of the club and staged by them. Last year the club presented "Fuss and Fudges," a playlet written by Hansen and Klein. Parts of the entertainment were repeated later. The Philosophy beauty chorus, widely advertised, proved a remarkable drawing card. Miss Mary Swan's love making was almost masculine in its intensity while Miss Esther Hall gave so good a take-off on the college fusser that three men swore off that night. Miss Sarah Wilkes and Miss Hall won many compliments on their scene, in which they sang "When the Ivy on the Campus Turns to Brown," a new melody that caught the fancy of the audience at once. Misses Hall and Swan interpolated the "University Clog" which won encore after encore. The cast was as follows:

The Green-Room

Whitcomb

UNTIL the organization of The Greenroom in the Fall quarter of 1907 Literature College of Women had no dramatic club. This organization was effected as the result of a desire on the part of several committees to give unique college programs. The histrionic ability of Literature college women had found expression somewhat earlier in the presentation of "A Proposal Under Difficulties," by John Kendrick Bangs, at the Reynolds Club Theater on May 21, under the direction of Adolph Pierrot.

To say that the play was given well is putting it mildly. Certainly great credit is due each of the performers for her excellent interpretation of the rôle assigned to her. Who could better express the charming bewilderment of Dorothy Andrews at the peculiar behavior of her two gentleman callers than did Miss Lorena Underhill? Who better control an excited maid, or more cleverly insist on giving the awkward fellow a fair chance only to yield gracefully to his appeal? And two such men as they were: Yardsley—flustered, uncertain, eager to do, but clumsy in the attempt, and yet passionately adoring his "dear Miss Dorothy;" Barlow, insinuating, confident of success, admirably mannish with his superior airs and exclusive attentions only to find his flattery of no avail in the end. Miss Vesta Urey, as Barlow, and Miss Jessie Heckman as Yardsley, were inimitable.

Then, funniest of all, with her delicious Irish brogue, her abundance of colored handkerchiefs soaked with tears, her expressive featherduster always in evidence, her comical self-appropriation of a proposal not meant for her ears and finally, after a stormy scene of mingled sobs and explanations her passionate return to "beloved Hicks," was Jennie, the Maid, as played by Miss Mamie Lilly. Snap and vim characterized the entire representation and a certain rare appreciation of the fine points that was most satisfying to the audience.

With this as an incentive the women of Literature college began the organization of The Greenroom. At the first trials the Misses Lilly, Wilder Heckman and Bowlan were chosen as a nucleus. At the second trial the Misses Gardner, Davis, Slaughter, Dickey and Tausche proved their ability and were admitted. Miss Wilder was chosen president and Miss Lilly secretary. The club hopes to present a new play in the near future.

ORGANIZATIONS

The Reynolds Club

EVER since the founding of the Reynolds Club, each year has marked a conspicuous advance in its general condition and relationship with students. The close of 1907-1908 ends a chapter in its history which records results much beyond those of the past. In every way the Club has progressed. Not only has the membership grown considerably and the treasurer's balance shown a most satisfactory increase, but improvements have been made in every phase of club life.

The Club seems now to have established its place in the general scheme of University affairs. Although the strenuous missionary tactics of the past have been discontinued, there are six hundred and forty-eight members; four hundred and fifty-eight active, and one hundred and ninety associate. It also rests upon a firm financial basis, the treasurer's balance being $3,219.44, of which $2,000 has been invested in a first real estate mortgage.

The numerous and varied improvements which have been either accomplished or outlined for the future are, besides the several successful social functions, the feature which probably most prominently marks the year. A new large table and chairs have been purchased for the library, and a heavy carved door, for the hall leading to the alumni room. More complete office accessories and new business systems have been installed. Steps have been taken toward the remodeling of part of the basement into an adequate locker room for members. The purchase of two new billiard and pool tables has also been favorably considered, and massive colonial seats to encircle the fireplaces and old mission umbrella racks are among the additions planned.

Perhaps the endeavor of the greatest magnitude which has been begun, is that toward the installation of a complete library of standard and popular books, not obtainable in the libraries of the University. It is planned to fill the empty shelves of the reading room with fiction, present and past, and other works desirable to the members, having for the purpose a standing order with the best publishing houses. Several thousand dollars will probably be needed to accomplish this end, and ways and means for raising this have been considered and decided upon.

A new constitution was issued during the year, containing alterations from the old in several vital particulars. There is also published with it, for the first time, a history of the life of Joseph Reynolds and the manner in which he became the means of establishing the Club.

The annual billiard, pool and bowling tournament held under the auspices of the Club brought out more contestants and enthusiasm than ever before. Phil Reddy secured the championship in billiards, and George Garrett in pool. Delta Upsilon carried off the banner in inter-fraternity bowling, and Freeman Morgan of the team got high score, high average and high individual play. Treacy and Gaarde took high doubles.

The officers of the year, elected at the annual meeting, March 1, 1907, were William Francis Hewitt, president; Frank Herbert Templeton, vice president; Karl Hale Dixon, secretary; John Flint Dille, treasurer; and Alvin Frederick Kramer, librarian. During the absence of Dille in the Winter Quarter, Dixon was elected temporary treasurer. Professors Merriam and Warren continued as members of the executive council. The officers for the ensuing year are John Flint Dille, president; Winston Patrick Henry, vice president; Edward Leydon McBride, treasurer, and Mansfield Ralph Cleary, librarian.

The Commonwealth Club

AMONG the many motives which prompt the organization of students into clubs and societies it is to be expected that some must be of a rather practical or utilitarian nature. The common interest of students of the departments of Political Science and Law finds expression in the Commonwealth Club. The club was organized to further good government and to enlighten voters who on entering active business or professional life will be alive to the needs of the public and by virtue of their training will be able to become leaders of public opinion in the community of which they chance to be members.

The club aims to keep in touch with the various city political clubs such as the Municipal Voter's League, the Citizen's Association and others of a perhaps more partisan nature and thus acquaint the members with practical politics and to secure prominent men to come to the University and give talks on their work. Several of the speakers who have addressed such meetings are W. J. Bryan, R. R. McCormick, Charles N. Jesup and Judge J. W. Mack. The officers and members of the club are:

The German Club

For a number of years students and faculty interested in German conversation have met in Lexington Hall on Friday afternoons. Classes in German are conducted informally and lectures given between 4 and 5 o'clock after which light refreshments are served. The membership of the club is over ninety. Many guests attend the meetings. Mr. Hans E. Gronow, of the German Department, is president, and Miss Florence Compton is treasurer.

On March 13, 1908, members of the club, under the direction of Mr. Gronow, gave Wilbrandt's "Jugendliebe," to an enthusiastic audience in the Reynolds Club Theater. The cast of characters was as follows:

ROMA VOGEL

When a tired editor remarks, over his lunch at King's, that the future of the American novel looks gloomy someone is certain to correct him by declaring that a small army of coming writers is training itself in practical authorship down at the University of Chicago. That body is the Pen club, now in the third year of its existence, the model for half a dozen similar organizations that have been formed in western universities in the last year. The members of the Pen club meet around the round table in Hutchinson hall once or twice a month and listen to the sage advice of men who have done things in the literary and journalistic world. During the year the club has entertained Opie Read, Samuel Ellsworth Kiser, Wilbur D. Nesbit, Emerson Hough, James O'Donnell Bennett, Wallace Rice, Milton Bucklin, Karl Harriman, and other writers of note in Chicago. Richard Henry Little was the guest of honor at the annual ladies dinner held this year on March 3, in the Commons Café.

This, and the annual authors' reading, which is held in Mandel hall, are the two events at which the cold, unfeeling world is allowed a glimpse into the Pen club's Bohemia. The members are as follows:

HARRY ARTHUR HANSEN	President
FREDSON FLORIEN GASS	Historian

The Japanese Club

A FRIENDLY organization of Japanese students existed even in the early days of the University, when Mr. Asada received the first doctor's degree. More recently the Japanese students have elected officers and adopted by-laws in order to form an ideal club. Its object is to foster national spirit and to strengthen friendships, and give opportunity for an exchange of views. In its programs, which are given on the second Saturday of the month either in the parlor of Middle Divinity or at the residence of Consul Shimizu, are included papers on scientific and general topics. Cups of native tea are included in the refreshments. Only Japanese is spoken at the club meetings. The members are:

中國新學生

Since 1898 the Chinese government has from time to time sent between five and six hundred young men and women to this country to study political science, diplomacy, law, economics, sociology, and many other branches of learning. Chicago did not have the Chinese government students until the arrival of Messrs. Wenfu Yiko Hu and Showin Weitsen Hsü in the summer of 1906. Both are from aristocratic families. They are well versed in their own literature and obtained the B.A. degree in the Imperial Examination. In the spring of 1905 Messrs. Hu and Hsü and five other young men were appointed by His Excellency, Sheng Kungpas, director general of the railway administration, vice president of the Ministry of Public Works and Junior guardian of the Heir Apparent, to study the commerce and banking system in this country; and a year later they were transferred to the Ministry of Commerce by His Highness, Prince Tsaiten, president of the ministry, who cabled to Sir Chentung Liangcheng, the Chinese minister at Washington, D. C., to take charge of them as students belonging to the ministry. Last year when Prime Minister Yuan Shih Kai, head of the Privy Council and Senior guardian of the Heir Apparent, became president of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, he cabled to the Chinese Minister to this country to instruct them to report what they have studied in this country and to specialize in diplomacy, political science and international law.

In 1905 Messrs. Hu and Hsü entered the State University at Berkeley, Cal. In the summer of 1906, they entered the law school of the University of Chicago. They have planned to go to Columbia and then to Europe; but in the meantime they may be transferred to Washington, D. C., to study diplomacy.

Mr. Yet C. Owyang was transferred from the University of California to Chicago in the fall of 1907. He is a son of the first Chinese Consul General to New York and later to San Francisco. He has finished the freshman year in the department of Economics of the University of California, and is now in the same department of Chicago. While in California he took active part in the Chinese Student Alliance. He was appointed to take charge of the annual of the '00 class of the Oriental department of the University of California. Mr. Owyang expects to further his study in Harvard.

THE Woman's Union was organized in the fall of 1891, with the object of uniting the women of the University for the promotion of their common interests. It was hoped that the women would find in this organization a means of drawing together in a large and generous fellowship, and of meeting some of the social needs which had been felt in the past. Membership was open to any woman connected in any way with the University.

Rooms were secured in the little Church of the Disciples on the corner of Fifty-seventh street and Lexington Avenue, and used, one as a lunch room and another as a library and room for social purposes. When Lexington Hall was built, the Union moved to its present quarters there, room fifteen. This room has been pleasantly furnished, and serves now as a quiet study or rest room in the morning, is used for committee meetings at noon, and for various social purposes in the afternoon.

Since its organization the Woman's Union has acted as official representative of the women of the University as a whole, and in this capacity has served as hostess to visiting delegations of women and high school girls. For years a special feature in its calendar was a weekly meeting on Wednesday afternoons, at which some guest spoke on affairs of general interest or immediate importance. Various exhibits have been held in the rooms from time to time, as of Japanese prints, Arts and Crafts and Consumer's League; and excursions of various sorts have been taken under the auspices of the Union. Other special features have been dances open to all the University, and a Thanksgiving spread.

In the fall of 1907 a change in the organization of the Union was made, whereby its main purpose is to keep open the Room for various stated uses of the University woman, and to serve them in any more especial way that it can. To this end it is governed at present by a president, vice president and council consisting of all women holding official positions in the University, a representative from each of the other women's organizations, and a few other members chosen by the council.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN LEAGUE

The Young Women's Christian League was established in 1802. Since that time it has been a growing organization with a recognized place in the University. Its aim has been to further the religious life among the women of the University. The League seeks to spread a spirit of friendship among its members and through them among all the women of the University. In the League Room, No. 1 Lexington Hall, all women students are welcome. New students are particularly invited to come there for assistance in registration or in finding rooms and boarding houses. Social functions are given in the League Room from time to time jointly with the Young Men's Christian Association. Bible Study is promoted both by organizing voluntary classes with student leaders and by supporting the courses offered by the faculty of the Divinity School. Religious meetings are held on Wednesday mornings and Tuesday afternoons. Philanthropic work is carried on at the various settlements and at the Home for Incurables.

Delegations have been sent during the past year to the Metropolitan Cabinet Conference held at Wheaton, April 5 to 6, to the Summer Conference at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, August 30 to September 10, to the State Convention at Elgin, November 7 to 10.

The Young Men's Christian Association

THE object of the Young Men's Christian Association is to promote a true Christian fellowship among the men of the University. Its activities are to help students to bring their lives up to the highest standard of Christian manhood.

Joint socials with the Young Women's Christian League are held two or three times a quarter, to which all members of the University are invited, and especially those who have no other social facilities. Early in the Fall quarter two stag socials were held in Snell and about 200 men attended. Following this, an informal reception was given in the Reynolds Club to about 60 students and faculty.

Group classes for daily systematic Bible study are held in the dormitories and fraternity houses. Other courses are given by the faculty of the Divinity School on Sunday mornings.

In April a series of meetings, conferences on personal religion, was held in Mandel Hall. Mr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation, was the principal speaker. Dr. Gunsaulus also led one large meeting.

The Ivy

I have sprung from the strength of the rich, brown soil

To the light of the full, warm sun,
From naught I grew till at last I knew
The joy of a life begun.

As I stretched my soft, green tendrils forth

Birth-blind in the bright, new day,
I felt the call of the granite wall

And clung to its surface gray,
For I grew from the heart, as it from the hand

Of a man whose mighty deed,
Love-blest at birth broke the deep tilled earth

For the planting of my seed,
The pulse of the life through the arch and hall.

The word and the writ of the brain,
Are one with the bond of my leafy frond,
The Spirit that links the twain.

I smile at the sun I laugh at the wind,
Through unrecked years I stay,

I reign serene the Spirit Queen,
The Soul of the City Gray.

Debating Team

ON January 17, 1908, the negative debating team representing Chicago in the Triangular debate won from the Northwestern affirmative team on the subject, "Resolved, that all corporations engaged in interstate commerce should be required to take out a federal charter on such terms as Congress may by law prescribe, constitutionality conceded." Michigan defeated Chicago's affirmative team at Chicago, and Northwestern's negative team at Ann Arbor, thereby winning two victories. The Chicago negative team was composed of Harold G. Moulton, E. J. Marshall and Paul M. O'Donnell. The affirmative team was composed of John I. Liver, J. P. Pope and Thomas H. Sanderson.

Freshman and Junior College Debates

THE Freshman debating team defeated the Freshman team of Northwestern University this spring in a contest that was arranged through the efforts of Mr. Henry Porter Chandler. Northwestern submitted the question, "Resolved, that the United States should subsidize her Merchant Marine." Chicago chose the negative of the question.

The debating team for Chicago was chosen in warmly contested preliminaries, resulting in victory for Vallee O. Appel, Millington F. Carpenter and Harold B. Smith.

Considerable interest has been worked up in the inter-college debates of the Junior men, in which the final result will not be known until near the end of the Spring quarter. In the preliminaries Science took the affirmative and Literature the negative of the question: "Resolved, that the Canadian banking system should be adopted in the United States." Philosophy took the affirmative and Arts the negative of "Resolved, that the Oklahoma referendum be adopted in all states."

The college debating teams of 1908 are made up of the following men:

The Quibblers

THE QUIBBLERS, as an organization, is no longer active. Since the Autumn quarter of 1907 no meetings have been held and it seems now that the women's Freshman debating society will be abandoned. Its activities extended from the Autumn quarter of 1905, when it was organized with the Freshman Debating club of 1904-1905 as its foundation. For two years it flourished, and up to last fall regular meetings were held. The Quibblers have prepared the following obituary:

A Year of Championships

FOUR championships in succession is the brilliant record of Varsity athletics for the year which is just closing. In tennis, football, basketball and swimming the sturdy wearers of the "C" fought their victorious way to the top. The clean flukeless defeat of Minnesota on the Minneapolis gridiron coupled with the significance of the truly national championship in basketball makes the past season one long to be glorious in the annals of Maroon camps.

To the student mind at least, the achievements of each team are typified by its captain and coach. When the Chicago man thinks of that score of 18 to 12 on that afternoon last fall just before Minneapolis went mad he can not help but think of Leo De Tray and Amos Alonzo Stagg. And just as clearly are Captain Schommer and Dr. Raycroft identified with the defeat of Wisconsin and Pennsylvania and Captain Badenoch and Coach Knudson with the aquatic triumphs. And in tennis, the figure of Captain Gray stands out with even more clearness. All honor be to the men behind the guns as well as to their leaders but for the brilliant season of 1907-8 the brawny personality of those leaders and their coaches will always be associated with the greatest collection of championship titles ever brought home to Chicago.

Paul Gray started the ball rolling when he won the singles in the western inter-collegiate tennis tournament. This feat he followed by the capture of the doubles with Fred Carr. Next in lime light came Captain De Tray and Director Stagg. Indiana, Illinois and Purdue fell in quick succession before the Maroon eleven and by a decisive defeat Minnesota too was humbled. Thus did the Conference championship come to Chicago.

The two other championships were won almost simultaneously. Captain Schommer's men, coached by Dr. Raycroft, achieved the first really valid claim to primacy in any branch of American athletics. After overcoming the University of Wisconsin and the other teams of the middle west, Chicago defeated Pennsylvania, champion of the east, in two successive games. And as the crowning touch, the Varsity five overwhelmed the team of the Brigham Young University, which held undisputed claim to the basketball title of the far west. And finally, Captain Badenoch and Coach Oscar Knudson splashed their way to the long desired western swimming pennant.

Tennis, football, basketball, swimming—truly it has been a great year.

MAY 1917

Football

CHICAGO, 18; Minnesota, 12.

No flukes. No rain. No accidents.

Just football. More football. Staggian football. Eleven men all the time football.

The western championship—clean, straight, decisive.

No wonder Minneapolis went mad. No wonder the drummer broke the head of the drum. No wonder—well, no wonder.

Of course the town was painted red. And Minneapolitans came out and helped smear the carmine. Not since the days of Father Hennepin had such a riotous flood of enthusiasm inundated the town. Even had the Gophers won it is doubtful if greater recognition would have been accorded them than was given the invading band from the south. The erstwhile rooters for Minnesota had seen the wonderful eleven which had gone down to a rainy defeat the year before on Marshall Field earn a decisive victory and they were sportsmen enough to show them their admiration.

And what a victory it was! It was won by superior team work, superior endurance and superior adaptability to the new rules with their innumerable opportunities for a heady team which does not stop to admire the scenery.

The triumph gave all the greater joy because it was hoped for rather than expected. When the game started the result looked dubious to the devoted band of Maroon adherents, small in number because the railways refused to make any material reduction in fare. Scarcely had the referee's whistle first sounded before Capron, the Eckersall of the northland, booted the oval over the posts for a count of four. The Gophers, on a slippery field and backed by their greatly superior weight, seemed for a moment invincible.

But suddenly something happened; the cause thereof was one Steffen. Wallie suddenly decided that he and the ball were wanted down behind the goal posts, yards and yards away. With the pigskin tucked under his arm he arrived at his destination. As startled Gophers picked themselves up from various portions of the field, it appeared that they thought that he must have been in somewhat of a hurry. Page kicked goal, making the score 6 to 4.

Then Capron scored again. After a few minutes of gruelling play back and forth, the Minnesota star kicked goal from the fifty-three yards line. Five minutes later time was called for the first half with the score 8 to 6 against Chicago.

Were the Maroon adherents downhearted? They had learned too often that the game of the "Grand Old Man's" warriors is not over until the last sound of the referee's whistle has died away. They knew that Mr. Stagg was saying things to his men—things that counted. They remembered the past—how eleven light battered substitutes had fought their way the whole length of Ferry Field that memorable night when Hugo Bezdek had planted the ball behind Michigan's goal posts, and what had happened in '99 and again in '04. Then the team trotted out again—virtually the same team because Coach Stagg believed that the men who had actually played in the first half were better able to deal with the beef of Coach William's men than the fresher reserves.

The second half began with the ball in Chicago's possession. After a few polite exchanges of punts it was the varsity's ball on the Gopher's twenty-five yard line. On the first play, Iddings made a brilliant dodging, serpentine run off tackle and scored a touchdown.

The Maroon machine had begun to work. It could not be stopped—not then. The victorious march down the field commenced again. Minnesota put up a stiff defense but it was useless. In ten minutes of exhibition of what really could be done with the new game a forward pass and a goal from touchdown netted the varsity six points more.

Thus the score stood until near the end of the game. Then Capron just to show that the game wasn't a bit one sided booted his third goal from the field. Three goals from field; three touchdowns. And it was the light fast team—with Amos Alonzo Stagg back of it, which scored the three touchdowns against the beef of Coach William's men with their wonderful Capron. With this game went the Conference championship.

Chicago went into the contest an eleven of uncertain ability. It had done fair work in defeating Indiana and Illinois, but had not taken on the appear ance of a championship team. The loss of seven of the best men of the year before was a blow to Chicago's chances that could not be forgotten. What could be done without Eckersall, Parry, Walker, Noll, Russell, Kelley and Finger? Steffen, Iddings, Hewitt and Anderson were the only stars left from the year before. Added to these, was Leo De Tray, out of the game the year before, who had been elected captain. Evidently it was up to substitutes and new men to make a winning team. With this handicap to work against, Director Stagg was consistently non committal over Chicago's chances.

The game with Indiana opened the schedule. The Hoosiers came to the Midway, from whence was emanating an unusually good crop of bear stories, with the remark on the part of Jimmy Sheldon that his team was the best he had ever worked with. All that the Old Man would say about the brand of football that his pupil would hand him was that Chicago had an even chance.

The FORWARD PASS

The much-vaunted eleven came from Bloomington. The Varsity team won the game, 27 to 6, and at the same time convinced the critics of the Midway that it was well adapted to the new style of play. The new men played well and the Maroon line did not seem half as weak as it was alleged to be.

Illinois came next. The Orange and Blue held the Varsity for the first half to a score of ten points but in the second half Chicago rolled up a score of thirty-two points which might about as well have been another sixty-three if the team had taken the trouble. The most spectacular feature of the game was a sixty-five yard run for a touchdown by Captain De Tray. Steffen proved a consistent ground-gainer. The final score was 42 to 6.

The victory over Purdue, though never in doubt, was needed to cinch the championship claimed by virtue of the triumph at Minneapolis two weeks before. The light and inexperienced eleven of the Boilermakers was overwhelmed 56 to 0.

The last game of the season proved Chicago's only defeat. Carlisle beat the Varsity 18 to 4. The loss of this contest was all the harder to bear as the campus dopest had figured that a victory over the Indians would jolt even the superciliousness of the Eastern critics.

Yet, said the campus philosopher, it might have been worse. The Indians played their fiercest game and luck was with them all the way. They were fully prepared for Chicago's tactics while their style of play was new to Captain De Tray's warriors. Chicago rallied near the end of the game, and, completely outplaying the redskins for a few minutes, gave Steffen the opportunity to kick a goal from the field.

At the end of the season Chicago was well represented on the all-western elevens. Captain De Tray, Steffen and Hewitt were the most popular choices while Iddings and Doseff were given places by the majority of critics. The work of Page at end and of Harris at guard was well received.

From very unpromising material, the Old Man developed one of the greatest teams that ever wore the Maroon. The line, considered before the season opened as weak, proved practically impenetrable on line plunges. The backs worked with machine-like speed and precision in every game. The frequent changing of Merrian and Ferguson at full back did not deprive team play of smoothness. The forward passing of Steffen and Page was excellent, generally resulting in gains for the player who received the ball. They also alternated at the kicking end of the game and succeeded in holding their opponents a little more than even. The forward pass was the most brilliant of the plays introduced by the new rules. Under the tutelage of Mr. Stagg, the team acquired a mastery of its intricacies which was used to the confusion of many a far heavier team.

Speed, skill, intellect—these qualities more than made up in the season of 1907, as they have made up in every other season since Chicago entered western athletics, for a lack of brawn. Year after year the wearers of the Maroon, representing a university of comparatively few undergraduates, have been either at or near the fore of western athletics. What is the cause? Amos Alonzo Stagg and the Chicago spirit.

Men Who Have Gained Their Last Yard on the Gridiron

CAPTAIN LEO CARTER DE TRAY

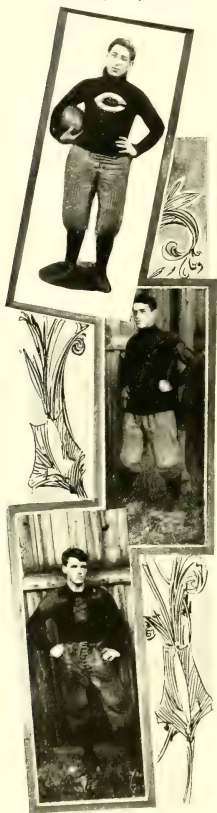

Captain De Tray, besides being an excellent leader, was one of the most brilliant players that ever represented Chicago on the gridiron. His dashing, heady method of carrying the ball added many a yard to the Maroon total. He proved flawless at making interference for the runner, and on defense had remarkable skill at designing the point of attack of the opposing team. "Leo" wasn't so bad on the forum either.

IVAN DOSEFF

He has been called the "find" of the year by more than one critic. His weight, coupled with strength and speed, early won him a position on the regular Maroon team, and eventually on several all-western elevens. And despite the charge that he was the masculine "Gibson girl," he could play football which made his opponents wonder what would happen to them in case of a collision with a creature of Harrison Fisher's construction. But it is as a practical sociologist who did things when there was necessity for things to be done that Ivan's chief claim to fame lies.

MAX ROHDE

Rohde did not get into many scrimmages, but made a favorable impression as a guard the few times he played. His only drawback was his lack of weight. Max declares, however, that he always was more at home in the water. Besides playing football and water polo, Max has the artistic temperament. And he is not the only athlete who has specialized in the Department of the History of Art.

WILLIAM FRANCIS HEWITT

From a novice to one of the best ends in the West—and all in one year—that is the story of "Bill" Hewitt's heroic rise in football. His adaptability to the new game gained him a place on the majority of the All-Western elevens for 1907. And yet his happiest moments were when he announced programs at the smokers of the Reynolds Club. And from such glory to the laboratory of the steel company at South Chicago—such is fate!

WELLINGTON DOWNING JONES

"Duke" Jones and "Fat" Handy were r-rivals. "Duke" wanted to be left guard; so did "Fat." The answer: both were. If football never has another enemy, it will always have "Duke," for that sport knocked out his chances of getting Phi Beta Kappa. But the Colonial Dames Scholarship ought to be enough for one man.

BENJAMIN FERGUSON

Ferguson's 180 pounds were an aid to him in his work as a line plunger, and he fitted well with the Maroon machine. He helped the runner, and, though not a flashy player, was consistent, and a hard worker.

ELTON JAMES MOULTON

Moulton went Jones one better. He won a "C" and a Phi Beta Kappa key. He proved a shifty man at tackle, and was in the running for the regular position on the team throughout the season.

Freshman Football Team 1907

HE Freshman football team was not allowed to play games with high schools, or freshmen of other colleges, per Conference regulations, and consequently had no other pleasure than acting target for the attack of the Varsity players in practice.

Hugo Bezdek, who coached the 1911 squad had a hard task set to make a good team out of the green material on hand. "Bunny" Rogers captained the eleven from quarter back position. Dougherty at half back, Crowley at full, Elliott at tackle and Briggs at center also did effective work during the season.

Track

CHICAGO nearly won the Conference. In spite of the 78 to 48 defeat administered by Illinois in a dual meet earlier in the track season, Director Stagg had hopes of capturing the prized contest on Marshall Field June 1. He feared the Illini, but at the last moment ventured the prediction that the Maroons would win, if only by their nerve.

As it was, the Orange and Blue took first with 31 points and the Maroons second with 28 1-3. Now, to lose a meet isn't so bad, but when two points are needed to bring the coveted position and when these eagerly-sought for points are lost through hard luck—well, that's something different. Just suppose Gerry Williamsen had not dropped from college until the end of the season. And what if "Quig" had not stumbled and fallen near the finish of the 220? And maybe "Ned" Merriam wouldn't have romped in with a sure second, if, after qualifying in the 120 yard hurdles, he had run the final heat! Besides, Chicago was ahead safely until near the finish, and if anything is disheartening, it is to be beaten out at the last minute.

However, we must be kind and forgive Illinois. She forgot her place in the 1907 Conference. She somehow or other thought she was entitled to win the meet. She was considerate to the extent that she allowed the Maroons to win second place. She might have "fixed" things up with Wisconsin, you know. These two colleges might have played "snooks." But no. That would have been going just a bit too far. To win the Conference was enough. To let Chicago down worse than second would have been unpardonable.

After all, Director Stagg should be forgiven for not gobbling up the Conference. At first sight, it may be difficult to see it just this way. Illinois won the baseball pennant. What claim had she to the big meet? But the Old Man is a prophet. He saw the football championship floating about—and a good, kind fairy told him that he was the chosen conqueror of it. He remembered tennis. He saw the swimming team winning all its meets, the basketball five showing both west and east how the game should be played. He put on his frayed-in field glasses for a glimpse beyond the reach of the naked eye. He—saw — a — Conference — going — to — Chicago — in — in . . .

"Ned" Merriam had the honor of tying with Burroughs of Illinois for highest number of points, each winning 10. He captured the 440, and the 220 low hurdles. San Lyon "returned to our midst" and contributed five points to the Chicago total. San beat the doctor at his own game last year. Since 1905, when he set a record in the two mile, he has been instructed never to run another two mile race. He would not disobey a physician for anything; so he ran one mile instead of two. Iddings was there with the long pole, and tied for first with Haggard of Drake.

Baseball and track carried on a merry duel for the favor of the versatile Schommer. He likes both, you know. What's more, he just won't give up one for the other. Result: He divided the points for second in the high jump. Pomeroy demonstrated his right to a "C" by capturing second in the broad jump. Thirds by Captain Russell in the discus, Quigley in the 100 and 220, Steffen in the 220 low hurdles, and Lingle in the quarter were the other places the Varsity won.

With the change from indoor to outdoor track, dopesters began to figure how Chicago would stack up in the added events. At first, the loss of Ed Parry impressed itself on them, along with the fact that Burroughs would compete for Illinois. Still, Gerry Williamsen in the hammer and Captain Russell in the discus were counted on to show the famous Illini interesting competition. Then, too, we still had Pomeroy in the broad jump, and Merriam had "found" himself as a hurdler.

The Purdue meet, won by a score of 80 to 37, was scarcely more than a tryout for Chicago. Chicago took first place in ten of the thirteen events, the only surprise furnished by the Boilermakers being the victory of White over Barker in the half mile.

Illinois came next. This was the dual meet of most interest on the schedule. It was expected to show which of the two teams would have first call in the Conference; also whether Chicago or Illinois was at an advantage in the field events. The score was 78 to 48, with the Illini at the agreeable end. Things looked bad for Chicago. Her consolation lay in the hope that the Conference would bring to the fore any number of phenoms in the events in which the Orange and Blue was strongest, and a most remarkable dearth where the Maroon had the advantage. It turned out that neither happened; that Chicago's showing was due to a great improvement between the time of the meet and the classic event in June.

The main lesson drawn from the Wisconsin meet, which the Varsity won, 69 1-3 to 56 2-3, was that the Badgers were destined to be factors in the Conference. Myers, Bertles and Messmer were the Wisconsin mainstays. Williamsen was out of the meet, having left college. His loss was not felt then, but as the time for the Conference drew nearer, it began to be figured out that the Varsity might lose where with the star hammer thrower competing it might win.

The story of the Conference has been told, and need not, for obvious reasons, be repeated. At the end of the season Captain Russell, Barker, Lyon and McAvoy were lost to the team. Quigley was elected captain for next year.

Indoor Track, 1908

The indoor season found the Varsity so badly crippled that at the beginning of the season it was hard to see a victory over Illinois. The down state team appeared to have the call in most of the events. Confidence was renewed, however, as the time for the meet drew near and followers of the team figured out a close score. The Orange and Blue triumphed, however, 52 to 34.

Coach Friend went to work with his men, studied the Staggian expression of pessimism, and wore it until the next meet. By reversing every event except the pole vault, fifty and mile, Captain Quigley's men won a glorious victory, 55 to 31.

Meets with the First Regiment and Chicago Athletic Association were both won by the Varsity. The University of Wisconsin relay race for the Conference championship, in which Chicago and Wisconsin were the sole entrants, went easily to Chicago.

Baseball

THE retroactive clause and Freshman rule left the baseball material for 1907 to be drawn entirely from the second and third year men. With only three veterans eligible—Captain Templeton at short and Walker and Gaarde, the battery—and with a scant supply for the six remaining positions, the outlook was rather dark.

The general opinion was that the team would be strong in the field and weak at the bat; but as the season progressed, the men fell down in fielding and hit like fiends. When the season closed, six were batting over .300 and the team average was .275, the best stick record of any Varsity nine.

Michigan's defection lessened somewhat the baseball interest, and left Illinois and Chicago to fight it out. As usual Huff's men took everything that came their way; the Illinois baseball "hoodoo" seemed more relentless than ever before. In two of the four games, Chicago had a safe lead in the ninth, with the game apparently tucked away, when—well, the Maroons lost.

Little difficulty was experienced in taking the measure of Oberlin, Purdue, Northwestern and Wisconsin, but Minnesota playing listlessly against other teams, proved a Tartar for the Varsity. In both games, the Gophers knocked Sullivan out of the box, and Walker was unable to check the slugging.

The climax of the season was reached in the Williams game. Williams, one of the strongest of Eastern teams, played a thirteen inning tie with Michigan, was beaten by Illinois by one point, and came to Chicago in desperation.

The game proved one of the most exciting seen on Marshall Field. Though Captain Templeton was out of the contest, the Varsity played errorless ball, while Williams made but one mistake. Sensational fielding and terrific hitting characterized the contest. Chicago led until the eighth inning, when a lucky three bagger just inside the first base foul line, with the bases full, sewed up the game for Williams by the score of 4-2. The automobile rides, trips to the amusement parks, and a rousing smoker at the Reynolds Club gave the visiting easterners a good impression of Chicago hospitality. Captain Templeton, Walker, Sullivan, Moulton and Van Patten appeared for the last time in the Williams game on the Varsity diamond.

Basketball

THE western championship, the national championship—the first truly national championship, and the elevation of basketball from a minor to a major sport—those are the achievements of the Varsity five of 1908.

The western championship was won after three hard fast games with Wisconsin. The first, at Madison, Wisconsin won 29 to 17, the Varsity's defeat being largely due to the inexperience of the team as a whole. Chicago won the next in handy style in Bartlett and also the rubber at Madison by which Dr. Raycroft and Director Hutchins had agreed to settle the tie. This left Chicago free to meet Pennsylvania for the national title.

Two games were played with the Quakers, both of which Chicago won after spectacular playing. Captain Schommer's men won the first, played on the home floor, by the score of 21 to 18 and the second, played at Philadelphia, by the score of 18 to 16. Each contest was nip and tuck all the way, neither game being won until the last whistle sounded.

Except for the Wisconsin and Pennsylvania fives, the Varsity quintet overwhelmed all the teams which it met although Minnesota offered the greatest objection to being run over.

Every man on the team showed stellar brilliance. Captain Schommer proved himself far and away the greatest basketball player in the country. Ryan, his nearest competitor, picked for all-American center, was outplayed at every point. Hoffman, though not so spectacular a player as Page, did wonderfully effective work particularly when matched against Fitzpatrick. Falls was a steady point-gainer throughout the season and his basket-throwing in the last Pennsylvania game was so good that eastern critics are disposed to give him the credit for cinching the game for Chicago. Georgen and Harris were also effective.

The assertion that this is the first truly national championship ever won is conservative. Chicago, playing 23 games, defeated all the teams of the middle west. Illinois which had outplayed all the teams of the south, was overwhelmed by the Varsity by the scores of 35 to 21 and 42 to 17. Brigham Young University was the acknowledged champion of the far west; Captain Schommer's men played its team off its feet in about five minutes. Pennsylvania had actually met and defeated in over twenty games all the teams of the east; Pennsylvania suffered two decisive defeats at the hands of Chicago. The only territory whose basketball representatives had not yielded their scalps to Captain Schommer's belt was the Pacific coast. If Leland Stanford and California ever have tried to play basketball, no one west of the Sierra Nevadas has ever heard of it. Middle west, far west, south and east—what better claim to a truly national championship could there be?

The showing of the team this year was so good that the Board of Physical Culture and Athletics raised basketball from a minor to a major sport. Captain Schommer, Georgen, Falls, Hoffman and Page received their Varsity "C" this year.

Truly, has not basketball come into its own?

The Tennis Championship

A victory for the Varsity in singles and doubles at the Western Inter-Collegiate Tournament won for Chicago the championship in tennis. It was the first of the series of victories which made the past season so gloriously memorable in the annals of Maroon athletics. Captain Paul R. Gray won the singles and he and Frederick W. Carr captured the doubles. Each was rewarded with the Varsity "C." Captain Gray, though taking two straight sets from Loesch of Wisconsin, found his opponent a harder proposition than Roehm proved to Carr. In the finals, Carr defaulted to Gray.

Minnesota was defeated at Minneapolis 5-1 but heavy rains prevented one of the contests with Wisconsin. At the end of the season, Robert J. Muir of Minnesota was elected president and Carr secretary-treasurer of the Western Inter-Collegiate Tennis Association.

Aquatics

With swimming material plentiful but polo men scarce, Coach Knudson turned out an aquatic team that won the much-coveted western championship. All three meets were won after severe contests and but one polo game was lost, Illinois being responsible for that. Chicago defeated Wisconsin, 34 to 21, in the home tank, the Varsity scoring seven goals in polo to none for the Cardinals. This victory was followed by one more decisive over Illinois, the down-state men being trounced 38 to 8. In the return meet with the state university, Chicago lost the polo game but managed to secure enough points in the swimming events to win the contest by a count of 26 to 20.

In the spring meet of 1907, Pennsylvania captured all the firsts.

The Cross Country Team

With the biggest squad that has yet come out for a Varsity cross country team to work with, Captain Caldwell endeavored to wrest the western inter-collegiate championship from Nebraska and Wisconsin November 23. The two visiting teams proved too fast company for Chicago, however. Caldwell himself was ill and unable to compete, and Johlin, Long, Morgan, MacNeish and Stuart were forced to take third place. Nebraska and Wisconsin finished in the order named.

The following is the makeup of the 1907 Cross Country Club: Karl P. Stuart, President; Fred C. Caldwell, captain; J. M. Johlin, Albert Long, John W. MacNeish, Freeman Morgan, L. A. Kling, L. K. Canouse, W. D. Dolan, W. H. Floyd, Norman Barker, F. E. Bernard, S. S. Visher, M. F. Carpenter, M. S. Tait and R. P. Sherer.

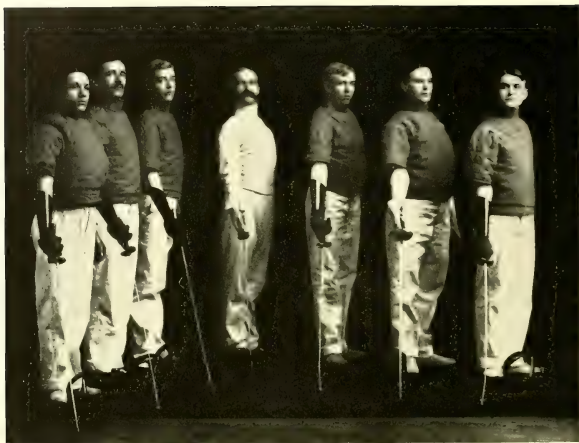

The Gymnastic Team

This year's gymnastic team was able to sit up a little and take some nourishment. At the meet at Madison, April 9, it took second place being defeated by Wisconsin 31½ to 10 but beating Minnesota and Nebraska. An injury to Berndt prevented Captain Murrah's men from making a better showing.

Soccer

The one outside game of the Varsity soccer team was played with Englewood High School, Captain Loose's men winning this by 4 to 0. Early snow-fall prevented games with the Wanderers and the Hyde Park Blues.

Fencing

Fencing is the latest sport to gain a foothold at the University. M. de Beauviere took a squad of students in hand, and after but two quarters of work entered a team in the A. A. U. championship contest. Though not winning any points in the finals, the men made the various sectional champions work fast to beat them. The team was made up of S. Lescano, Roy Baldrige, F. O. Koepke, R. J. Kerner, and Walter Jones. R. R. Mix and T. C. Pease represented the University at rapier.

Golf

The University golf team played only one inter-collegiate tournament in 1907, and that was with the University of Wisconsin on the Wisconsin links June 1. Captain Hebbard, Harvey Meagher, Erwin Paul Zeisler and Walter H. Morse won from the Badger team, 4 to 3. The matches were played in a driving rain, but this handicap did not prevent the Chicago men from doing sensational work. The four Maroons who competed against Wisconsin received Varsity emblems at the end of the season.

Second Annual Junior Day Meet

Monday, June 17, 1907

The second Junior college field meet held on Marshall Field June 17 was fought out in the face of a strenuous gale. It became evident early that the affair was to be a dual between Philosophy and Science Colleges with Arts and Literature picking up a few stray points. Philosophy won out, winning 57 points to 40 for Science, 18 for Arts and 7 for Literature.

Inter-Fraternity Athletics

Inter-fraternity athletics were much more vigorous than before in the season 1907-8. Chi Psi won the baseball championship and after a vigorous contest, Delta Upsilon captured the bowling banner, Freeman Morgan having acquired a collection of prizes for individual work.

WOMEN'S

ATHLETICS

Ten Years of Effort

To those initiated into the mysteries of athletics for women at the University of Chicago, Bartlett Gymnasium looms up with a grandeur which precludes any possible interest in the low building south of Lexington. But to those who have passed within its doors, have become acquainted with the department continually at work there, and have entered into its activities, the low building becomes one of the most interesting spots on the campus. A little ancient history gives it even an aspect of grandeur; far from '98 and the coming of Miss Dudley, to '08 and the erection of this building, the department was forced to move from a frame building on the present site of Mandel, to a church back of the building formerly occupied, to the present psychology laboratory, and to the College of Education. In spite of these migrations and the numerous difficulties entailed, Miss Dudley succeeded in maintaining a department which has shown steady growth from year to year. Today, Miss Dudley and her assistants carry on a wide range of work with such success that the department stands as one of the best in the country. Not only are classes and teams well organized and conducted, but they are conducted with an insistence upon high ideals which brings to every student much besides mere physical training. It is a department which speaks so well for itself, as a result of the past ten years, that it scarcely needs the warm commendation so strongly felt by all the initiated.

Closely allied with the activity of the department is the work of the Woman's Athletic Association. The present students owe the existence of the association to a strong nucleus of athletic students in 1904, whose purpose in organizing it was to secure coöperation with the department for the promotion of the physical and social activity of University women. It has proved to be a most prosperous organization. For four years a carnival demanding the coöperation of a large number of women, has been held with marked success. Various social activities have been carried on, the events of special interest this year being an opening reception and a floor warming in the Fall quarter, and a reception to the new officers in the Winter quarter. The two traditions, however, which best embody the spirit of the Association, are the annual presentation of the "C" pins, and the Spring athletic banquet.

The W.A.A. Vaudeville

Extract From An Address Delivered Before The Club of Progressive Women of Chicago. By Sophronisba Breckinridge.

----- "Friends, I repeat it, the Golden Age has dawned when woman has thrown off the shackles of tradition, has left the Egypt of her bondage, fulfilled her destined years of wandering, and now has entered into the Canaan of her hopes. She rejoices to behold the rising generation of her sex enjoying the blessed privileges for which she has striven. Let me cite in support of my optimistic views regarding the woman of today an illustration which has come under my personal notice.

Would that you might all have visited with me the woman's gymnasium of the University of Chicago on the night of the annual carnival given by the Woman's Athletic Association of that institution. Such evidence of the ingenuity and versatility of woman's ability as was there displayed cannot be overlooked. By skillful hands the gymnasium was converted to a small theater, and there the women gave an entertainment wholly original both in production and presentation, with success which might well cause the confident Blackfriars pangs of envy.

The performance was in the nature of a vaudeville program, well calculated to display the varied talents of the ambitious students. An artistic number by the Girl's Glee Club was followed by a realistic rendition of Holme's famous ballad of the "Oyster Man" with graceful delsarte accompaniment. There was an exhibition of mechanical dolls which I am informed, the young ladies actually constructed themselves, representing, very faithfully I judge from their enthusiastic reception, certain revered members of the faculty. There was a clog dance of wooden figures on vibrating platforms, skillfully manipulated by young women behind an intervening curtain. A comical musical number was given by two charming sisters in picturesque costume, and a complicated dance was performed by two young women in grotesquely interesting garb.

Then came the musical sketch, written, staged, and presented by the young women. Here, in song and dance, four quarters of college life were characteristically portrayed by four choruses. There was the athletic spirit of autumn;—be it said to its credit the University slights not the time-honored adage, "A sound mind in a health body."—There was the gentle influence which woman exerts in the social world—the theme of the winter chorus. There was the poetic conception of verdant youth radiant in the springtime, daintily portrayed by a profusion of white gowns, broad-brimmed hats, and graceful garlands. There was the serious, earnestly purpose that pervades the campus in the summer months. If there be any who shake their pessimistic heads in apprehension for the failing domesticity of the modern woman, I would add that the costumes worn were the creation of her needle as well as of her mind, and that the fragrant odor of steaming (?) coffee lured crowds into the adjoining building, where ample evidence of her skill in the culinary art was presented for sale.

Memo.

Attended annual dinner of Woman's Athletic Ass'n. The association, as I understand it, exists to promote a manual dexterity in hurling semi-clastic spheroids, and other forms of athletic diversion. Miss Thyrsa Barton was toast-mistress—however, I could not feel that the specific gravity of the toasts was great, for eruptions of laughter continued in spasmodic detonation throughout, thereby testing the relative density of her audience.

President Judson was the first speaker. Mentioned—ah, yes, baseball, I believe—exactly, exactly—more spheroids—one most peculiar remark—"brains in one's arms as well as head"—perfectly true—perfectly general—perfectly meaningless. He had scarcely concluded when a most peculiar phenomenon occurred among the young ladies—precisely—a simultaneous outburst of super-heated air, enthusiasm, etc., producing a strangely volcanic vocal action of singular shrillness in reverberation—most interesting. (Mem.—Do they do it often?) An interval of quiescence continued until another accumulation of heated vapor demanded a repetition of the phenomenon.

Dr. Henderson spoke next. "Athletics Relative to Home Life"—can't get his point of view at all.—Professor Tarbell and I often remark that our Mary Bridget's muscular development is quite sufficient—exactly—haven't had to summon the Dekes yet for assistance, but can not tell what might happen—some emergency where football men would be useful.

I recalled my mind to the subject—I had been skimming over a few simple problems in the dissolution of aluminous ortho-silicate occurring in rhombic dodecahedrons—to Miss Jane Addams, who spoke most interestingly of the small park system—followed by Miss Dudley, who presented banners and small metallic symbols for athletic triumphs—(N. B.—Vocal phenomena more apparent) I trembled to think of the risks involved in these sports, owing to osseous frangibility of the players, while discoursing to the young lady on my left on the Plutonic rock formations, she murmured—"Not exactly Platonic?" "Then exactly not." I thundered, noting the Daily Maroon reporter taking down my words.

At last with a shock arising from some sudden violent impulse, whereby an undulation is propagated in various directions we rose from the table—exactly—the undulation might almost have been classified "Table-rock"—the oscillation became of a subsiding nature, and our re-emergence completed the enumeration of events amid spontaneous enthusiasm.

DIVINITY

Dean Mathews and the Divinity School

THE most notable event of the year in the Divinity School has been the promotion of Professor Shailer Mathews from Junior Dean to Dean of the School. Mr. Mathews fills the vacancy caused by the death in February, 1907, of Dr. Eri Baker Hulbert, who since the incorporation of the Baptist Union Theological Seminary within the University as its Divinity School had been its head.

In addition to his executive position, Mr. Mathews is Professor of Historical and Comparative Theology in the University and edits The World Today. Unlike his predecessor as head of the School, he is an author as well as a scholar and teacher, many books recognized as standard in theology and religion bearing his name. Professor Mathews came to the new University in 1894 from Colby College, his alma mater, where he had occupied the chair of History and Political Economy. He has been one of the most energetic of the founders of the Religious Education Society.

Besides being a scholar and a writer, the new head of the Divinity School is an able executive. Any man who can run a great department of a great university, teach the regular quota of classes each quarter, manage a monthly magazine of national standing, and take an active part in any number of activities on the side is a human mechanism of great power. And as far as Dean Mathews is concerned, the wonderful part of it all is that he still has the time to be uniformly kindly. The loss of Dean Hulbert was a great blow to the Divinity School; surely if any man can compensate for that loss it is his friend and successor, Shailer Mathews.

Every educational institution is dominated by the men who constitute its faculty. To a remarkable extent this is true of the Divinity School; the scholarship and personality of Dr. Harper, Deans Hulbert and Mathews and their fellow workers have made it what it is.

THE SCHOOL.

The Divinity School consists of the Graduate Divinity School, the English Theological Seminary, the Dano-Norwegian Theological Seminary and the Swedish Theological Seminary. It has an enrollment of 422 students, from as many as twenty different religious denominations.

The men on the faculty are among the ablest in the University and are teachers as well as scholars. The profound impression made upon the school by such men as Dr. Harper and Dean Hulbert will always remain. The numerous books and periodicals which are issued by the members of this faculty are shaping the religious and the modern theological thought.

The aim of the school as set forth in the curriculum is, "the solution of the problem of clerical discipline suited to the requirements of the modern times in which we live." The great doctrines of Christianity have been thought through from the modern Scientific point of view; and the results have been correlated with the thinking of the age.

The graduates have gone out into all parts of the world carrying with them the spirit and the ideals of their Alma Mater and occupying prominent places of leadership. Three former Chicago men are directors of guilds in connection with the Universities of Iowa, Illinois and Michigan. Nine men of the alumni are state superintendents of church activities. Some have gone to the foreign fields as teachers and preachers, but by far the greatest number of them have become pastors.

In a manner nobly consistent with the ideals of their University they are helping to determine the future of the American people.

STUDENT LIFE.

From time out of mind, the divinity student has been the conventional victim of the college satirist and cartoonist. He has been pictured as unkempt, unduped and psychologically as well as physically long haired. Nowhere has this conventional attitude received the jolt that it has at the University of Chicago.

Besides having student activities of their own, the men of the Divinity School take an active part in the student life of the whole University. No activity from the Black Bears to the V. M. C. A. is without their presence. Aggressive, clean cut, and generally more prosperous in appearance than the undergraduates or members of the other schools, the divinity student is a potent factor in the student life of the whole University. Of course the lines of connection with the Divinity School occupy much of his attention. The Evangelistic Band and the organization devoted to research in various subjects have always been popular. Devotional and social meetings are held frequently in Haskell Assembly Hall and in the parlors of the three divinity halls. The life of divinity student may be more earnest than the life of the undergraduate at the college, but it is none the less pleasant or full.

The Divinity Council

The Divinity Council is the representative body of the divinity students before the faculty. It has general charge, on the students' side, of all matters pertaining to the faculty and students. The Council is composed of the officers and chairmen of the several committees of the Students' Association of the Divinity School.

Charles Edmund Hewitt

Perhaps no member of the faculty of the Divinity School has come into such close contact with the students as Charles Edmund Hewitt, D.D., student secretary. Most of the members of the school occupy on Sunday pastorates in and about Chicago. In this way they obtain actual experience in supplying the needs of a congregation and in addition secure welcome additions to their incomes. Dr. Hewitt superintends this work, receives the calls from the churches, and makes the assignments of the men.

Dr. Hewitt's connection with the University dates from 1899. Previously he had held pastorates at Ypsilanti, Mich., and at Bloomington, Peoria and Chicago, Ill. For the ten years previous to his coming to Chicago, he held the secretaryship of the Northwestern Baptist Education Society. He is a graduate of the University of Rochester.

The hold which Dr. Hewitt has obtained on the members of the Divinity School is the result of the inherent kindness of his nature. The anxieties and troubles of the men under his care have always been his own. Other members of the faculty of the Divinity School may have contributed more scholarship to the institution but no man will have a warmer place in the hearts of succeeding generations of alumni.

The Year at the Law School

THE high standards of the Law school have been held up for admiration so often that the historian would almost be impelled to drop the discussion were it not for the remarkable vindication of the University's requirements, instanced in the enormous increase in the number of students. From a little more than seventy embryonic attorneys the number has grown to almost three hundred in five years, and three fourths of the states, over one hundred colleges and forty law schools have been deplorably depleted of res judicata in the process of development.

An almost unintelligible tangle of words, indicative of profound legal mentality, has been officially set forth in defence of the standard and system at Chicago this year by Dean Hall, who says:

"The study of law is no task for immature minds, which can comprehend neither the basis of social experience upon which legal principles rest, nor the nature of those social problems that are pressing today for solution, nor which can grasp the proper application of these principles to the manifold activities and complexities of modern life."

As the tremulous freshman waits in anguished suspension for notices in Property, Torts and Contracts, a complete realization of the soundness of the judgment pronounced upon immature minds enshrouds him. Likewise, the senior, with that profundity of thought to which he becomes addicted after three years of association with mature minds, expresses, not only his realization, but his affirmation of the principle involved. But, as with most great opinions there is a doleful dissent, for the so-called student who has imbibed freely of college life seriously doubts the efficacy of such preparation.

However, behold the result! Last year there were so many cum laude honors conferred that the graduate who had done merely Phi Beta Kappa work shrank back into the shadows of dark corners to avoid public shame.

The law library has grown this year to thirty thousand volumes, containing complete American, English, Scotch, Irish, Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and Indian reports, and statutes, and enough French, German, Spanish and Mexican treatises to enable the future lawyer to extract a fee from his client regardless of nationality. For the benefit of the reform element, which is convinced that the present laws are of trust manufacture there is an exhaustive collection of prehistoric laws and reports of cases.

An event of considerable artistic importance was the adornment of the walls of the Law School with the Pike Collection of legal engravings. Most of these are pictures of English judges. There are some Scotch and Irish brethren. A series of signed artist's proof etchings of all of the judges of the United States Supreme Court form the principal part of the American part of the collection. These dignitaries were hung in the different rooms of the law school under the direction of Dean Hall, according to the classification of the judicial crimes which they perpetrated upon the innocent public.

An annual resumé of Law school affairs would be inexcusably incomplete without a mention of the most important event of the year—the Law school smoker, December 5, 1907. Bill Leary presided as chairman, and with the assistance of Hugo Friend perpetrated a program, the memory of which still lingers in the minds of faculty and students.

The Law Class of 1908

With feelings of great satisfaction, yea, of pride and elation, the historian of the magnificent class of 1908 chronicles the many achievements of its illustrious members. Ever since we entered this manufacture of legal lights in the fall of 1905, we have been busy fulfilling and exceeding the expectations and prophecies of future careers.

During our first year, we quickly assimilated the principal theories and doctrines regarding gift and payment beneficiaries, the ordinary and reasonable standard of care of the ordinary and reasonably and careful and prudent men under ordinary circumstances, that "qui facit per alium" must face it himself, and when a thief is not a thief; and also, last, but not least, Freund asked us, "Vot does a man do ven he gets married?" Bowman, Woolf, and lately Galbraith have solved this last problem, so the rest of us take their word for it.

Robert B. Scott was our first president, and the honor so overwhelmed him, that he departed from us at the end of the first year. Wayland W. Magee was vice president; he also left us, to see what Harvard had to offer. Ralph Miller filled the double capacity of secretary and smoker committee man, as a result of which his tobacco jar has not been empty since. Carlisle was custodian of the treasury, and is still at large. Adams, Black and Carlson were our councilors, and supplied the faculty with welcome suggestions.

We went to our first Law smoker that year, and heard that it was much better for us to read our cases and abstract them, then to copy the headnotes out of the original reports; that the school was growing rapidly, and that the freshmen making merry at the smoker, with the preliminary exams coming off soon were like "the swan, which sings sweetly before it dies."

During our second year, we took the course in Trusts and Ventilation under the Judge. We learned that there were $83\frac{1}{2}$ exceptions to the Parol Evidence Rule, and that there is no such thing as Best Evidence. The Dean told us that Equity would enjoin a prize fight (Freund contra), and Whit insisted that though the Hilary Rules are not used anywhere in the world, still they are nice to know about.

As a reward of merit Carlson was promoted from the office of councilor to that of president. Hugo Freund was made vice president and Ralph Miller was retained as secretary.

It was during this year that the Laws won that famous 12-0 victory over the Medes—due largely to the prowess of '08 men such as Edwards, Carlson, Carlisle, Bard, Freund, Leary, et al, besides the mighty Claedge, who, however, nearly caused our downfall by forgetting which way he was going and getting over on the Medes' side.

This last year has been the sprint at the finish, in the final effort to clinch our crowns of glory, otherwise known as cum laudis. We learned that a corporation may often do things it is not supposed to be capable of doing; and in Administrative Law, that the Constitution doesn't apply to Chinamen.

At a most peaceable and harmonious class meeting, we elected Fred Bard president, with Bill Mathews, Carter and Miller to share the onerous duties connected with official position, while Pritchard, Long and Freund dispensed wisdom as counselors. And at this meeting also, Edwards, after having declined, as Caesar did, the many honors offered, was unanimously and involuntarily elected sergeant at arms.

And now as the end draws near, we are preparing to finish our career as a class of the University of Chicago Law School, in an appropriate blaze of glory, and to go forth into the world and convince a sceptical public and a still more sceptical profession, that we know something about law.

The Law Class of 1909

WHEN that precocious Monarch, Albert Balch, of the House of Houghton, known by his subjects as "Sunset Charlie," who got his A.B. before most of us saw our M.A., when he the throne descended, after a most happy and eventful reign, there succeeded him the air apparent Prince O'Donnell. At the time of his accession there were several other presumptive heirs, but they were all easily rebutted. As a part of the coronation ceremony, the Prince, who had been suffering from a baffling ailment, got rid of a speech, and has been getting better ever since. The speech was all cut and dried and only needed hauling away. But laying aside the hammer temporarily, and crossing the fingers, the Prince was a statesman of rare executive and pullitical ability, and despite his centuries of Royal Hibernian descent, he was democratic to the core and a great crony of that exponent of true Democracy, His Majesty's Jester, George "Butler" Yaple, whose hand extends to all.

About the time the Prince became King, changes were made in the lesser officers of state, and the office of chancellor was suspended as there was no subject-matter for his jurisdiction and the maintainence of that office was only a drain on the treasury. The chancellor himself said it was quite a change from his arduous duty of keeping King Albert's conscience.

The long "dry spell" of the present reign was broken when the Bench and Bar pulled off the trial of a Crown Case Reserved (for the occasion) at the Piccadilly clam house. The defendants Schwartz and Weber were convicted of high treason, though the defendant Schwartz nearly secured an acquittal by not giving the King's counsel a chance to speak. Everybody but the defendants agreed that the proceeding was a tribute to justice and a complete vindication of trial by jury. For an interesting narrative account of the trial the reader is referred most respectfully to the "Memoirs of Justice McDonald," who presided at the trial with great fairness. We have read with avidity the justice's account of the proceeding and in the way of paying a humble tribute to his memory, desire to say that he has apparently remembered everything up to about 11:30 o'clock.

The reign of King O'Donnell was ablaze with legal lights and resplendent with brilliant arguments in court. Many amusing things also happened, to the great merriment of those of us who are more sedate. We well remember the time that Whittier C. J. fined barristers M and S for "playing marbles" in court, but out of regard for them we will not refer to that matter. It might be said, however, that shortly after this incident barrister Schwartz had his coat-of-arms changed to a quince on a field of lemons with the brief but significant motto, "Jus."

We would like to refer to many others, at least in a curseory way, but perhaps it would not be wise, and in closing this brief account of a great era, we voice the sentiment of every loyal subject when we say God Save the King.

A basketball season in which the Law team suffered no defeat gave it the pennant in intercollege basketball. Six teams entered these contests, representing the Junior college of Literature, Science, Arts, and Philosophy, the Senior college, and the Law School. At the opening of the Winter quarter a schedule was arranged whereby each of the teams would play two games with each other team, and to the one winning the largest percentage of the contests would be presented the championship pennant. This schedule was most successfully executed—twenty-nine spirited and hard fought games being played, and only one forfeited. Science and the Seniors ran a close race for second place, the victory being decided in favor of Science only by a post-season game.

The Class of 1910

THERE is nothing like the first year course in the Law School to take the conceit out of a Freshman. Last fall we were all set up with our importance because we were the largest Freshman class in the history of the school, because several second year men visited our classes in Property and Contracts in order to take advantage of our knowledge of these subjects, because the football team composed chiefly of Freshmen beat the Medics 23 to 13, because we were so conspicuous that a special lecture was delivered at the Smoker by Pa Mechem for our benefit on the subject—"Why is a Law or What can a Freshman do to reform the profession?" and for many other reasons which could best be understood if you had seen us. But the marks in Property and Contracts are just out, and the truth that pride goes before a flunk is illustrated perfectly. The fault is not entirely our own however. In fact it seemed like old times again to be rushed for fraternities and law clubs, to be grasped by the hand in the old familiar condescending fashion, to be invited to dinner by upper classmen and treated generally as "catches." Then too the extreme familiarity and levity with which the profs were burlesqued at the smoker caused us to be ashamed of the seriousness with which we had taken them during the first few days, and now it is too late to get down to work. We were enjoined by proceedings in equity from carrying books about the building, and from loud and professional discussion in the corridors to the distress and discomfort of the sophomores who, by the way, were afraid they could not keep up with the procession if they did not keep us down by some chamber decision from which there is no appeal. Without doing these things how can a Freshman learn law? But we learned a little in spite of these preventions, viz., that the defendant is liable because he did the act complained of; that the weight of authority is all wrong on the subject of conditions in contracts; that sic utera tuo ut non alium ledere is right whether you think so or not, because the weight of authority says so; and that even in the halls of Justice disputes are not always settled by legal proceedings in cases where the fist is mightier than the hot air artist. In fact the appeal to arms caused the one big sensation of the year and furnished material for several moot cases on which the members of the faculty had to set in order to preserve the natural right of personal immunity from being infringed. Moreover grafting exists in its worst forms right here where professional courtesy is taught, as witness the assessment for the smoker. The money was devoted to stocking the smoking room with newspapers and periodicals instead of giving the councilors a "feed" to stop their charges of misappropriation. Also "politics" is rotten, as witness the smooth way in which Baker grabbed off two offices before anyone knew what had happened. We have not despaired however of redemption and future salvation though our aunts and grandmothers think we are committed to eternal perdition already. We are blessed with having many sturdy sons of the soil in our members whose ingenuity in pleading next year will no doubt enable us to present a good defense to the declaration of the Devil's counsel.

SOCIETY

The Washington Promenade

A NEW change has been rung in the biggest all-University social function of the year—the Washington promenade. The success of the prom of February 21, 1908, shows that Chicago is fully capable of supporting such an undertaking. The Washington promenade was the most successful of any all-University event of recent years, making glad the hearts of the dancers, and enabling the finance committee to remain in residence during the succeeding quarter.

The promenade was very ably managed. Plans were in order weeks before and when the day came everything moved like clockwork. The attendance exceeded all expectations, and set a new mark for University formals.

Charles B. Jordan and Miss Lois Kaufmann led the grand march, and Alvin Kramer and Miss Eleanor Day led the alternate wing. The work of the reception committee was very successful. The committees were:

General Chairman CHARLES B. JORDAN

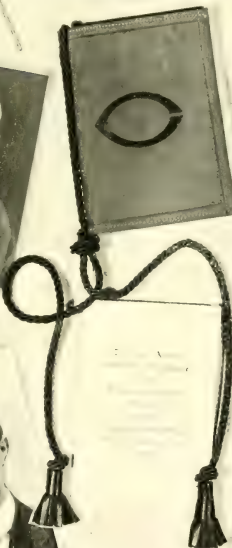

Finance—Alvin E. Kramer, chairman; Hart E. Baker, Karl H. Dixon, Paul V. Harper.

Arrangements—Luther D. Fernald, chairman; Francis Baker, Florence Chaney, Helen Sunny, Harriet Wilkes, Wilson A. Austin, Kenneth O. Crosby, Harry W. Harriman, Max L. Richards.

Reception—Norman Barker, chairman; Florence Harper, Mary Morton, Ruth Porter, Harvey B. Fuller, Jr., Marcus A. Hirschl, Clarence Russell.

Dancing—Frank S. Bevan, chairman; Mary Heap, Davie Hendricks, Chas. H. Ireland, Frank Im C. McLean.

Decorations—Helen Hurd, chairman; Jessie Boyington, Eleanor Day, Gertrude Greenbaum, Helen Gumsaulus, Winifred Kelso, Edith Moore, H. H. Chandler, Jr., Henry B. Roney, Thos. H. Sanderson, Chas. C. Staehling, Frank H. Templeton.

THE JUNIOR PROMENADE

PROMENADES always linger long in the memories of those who attend. The glories of the Junior promenade of June 7 have not yet passed out from among us. Winston Henry still has a faint recollection of the comment that swept over the assembly as with measured tread he moved serenely—and safely—thought the figures of the first grand march. Rens Sherer was there too, but the figures he remembers are of a different kind, for he held the burdensome position of finance chairman, and was one of the lucky four who divided the frappé that was left over. There are still others who remember the Prom—Famous, the tailor, for instance, and Buck, the liveryman—but their interest, let us hope, has long been forked over.

The fortunate ones who were there will say, too, that the decorations which completely screened the great high vault of Bartlett and showed a mass of leafy branches above the dancers, were particularly attractive. The crowd that gathered around the tables in Hutchinson hall that evening was larger than had been seen at a Junior promenade for years.

The patronesses for the event were Mrs. Harry Pratt Judson, Mrs. George Edgar Vincent, Mrs. Amos Alonzo Stagg, Miss Sophonisba Breckinridge and Mrs. Robert Morss Lovett.

The officers and committees were:

Chairman of Junior day	NED MERRIAM
Leader of the Promenade	WINSTON PATRICK HENRY

COMMITTEES

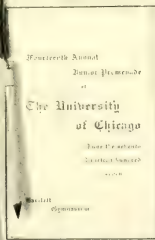

Finance—Renslow Parker Sherer, chairman; Francis Harvey Welling, John Flint Dille, Daniel Webster Ferguson.

Receipts—William Patterson MacCracken, chairman; Edward MacBride, Paul Vincent Harper, John Ernest Davenport, Gertrude Greensbaum, Ethel Louise Chamberlain, Minona Fitts, Ruth Jackman.

Dancers—Benjamin Franklin Newman, chairman; Preston Cass, Elsie Scholinger, Cole Yates Rowe, Harold Cushman Gifford.

Arrangement—Frederick Whitshar Carr, Jean Compton, J. Craig Bowman, Edith Whitten Osgood.

Decorations—Elizabeth Huelens, chairman; Lucia Cole, Alice Bright, Vivian Rice, Mary Kenney, Howard Blackford, Albert Long, Bernard Kroeg, George Garrett, Marguerite Proby.

Democracy within and without the University formed the basis of the two most unique social affairs ever held at Chicago—the Settlement picnic and the Settlement dance. At the first, a crowd of University men and women went over to the Settlement and saw its actual conditions and needs against a pleasant background of supper, entertainment and dance; at the second, students of every social complexion forgot all the barriers of local caste and packed Bartlett for the sake of the Settlement.

THE PICNIC.

On Saturday afternoon and evening, January 11th, the first Settlement picnic was held at the University Settlement. The picnic was the outcome of a desire to acquaint the students more generally with the activities of our Settlement, and to interest them in the work. The result was successful even beyond all anticipations, for a very real enthusiasm and interest in the undertaking was shown by the students. It is hoped now that the picnic may become an annual affair.

About six hundred went over to the Settlement between five and six o'clock in the afternoon. At six a buffet supper, furnished by the women of the Settlement Leagues, was served. The long line of guests filed by the bounteously heaped tables, and were helped in filling their plates by Mrs. Arnett, Mrs. Eaton, Miss Dudley, Miss Harriet Walton and others.

After the supper, the guests gathered in the gymnasium for the evening's entertainment. Miss McDowell told of the problems with which the Settlement had to deal and discussed ways in which the students could help to meet them. A minstrel show, presented by one of the boys' clubs of the neighborhood was then given and was much appreciated, judging by the demands of the audience for encores.

The seats were then cleared away, and dancing followed for an hour. Music was furnished by Miss Walton at the piano, accompanied by Mr. Herman James with the violin, and Mr. Harry Harper as harpist. The guests left at about ten o'clock feeling an added interest and sense of responsibilities in the development of the Settlement, and having experienced an enjoyable evening.

The student committee in charge was:

Marcus A. Hirschl, chairman; Messrs. James, Dabney, Paul, Harper.

THE DANCE.

In connection with the picnic, a Settlement dance was given at the University on Friday evening, January 31st. The object was both to raise money for the Settlement, and to institute at the University a big representative dance, which should be essentially informal in character, and in which the University as a whole—both faculty and students—should join. Both ends were realized, for about eight hundred people came, as many as Bartlett gymnasium could well accommodate, and in the neighborhood of $400 was received. Simple refreshments were served at tables set in the four corners of the room and presided over by Mrs. Walton, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Marsh, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. Johnson, and Miss Dudley. A committee of thirty ushers was appointed to aid in introducing people and in making out of programs. The ushers were:

THE YEAR AT THE CLUB

THE real center of social interest in the University is the Reynolds Club. Its calendar has included dances and smokers, a Hard Times party, a Leap Year party and other club events, besides many other functions given by clubs and organizations. Of the eleven informals the Hard Times party and Leap Year dance stand pre-eminent. At the former masqueraders, shabby genteels, and tramps whirled about the floor under the dim light of lanterns, sat on nail kegs and rough boards and consumed apples and cider with the hungry feverishness which accompanies a year of financial panic. Harvey Fuller and Caroline Dickey won first prize for artistic eccentricity of costume; Paul Harper and Ethel Terry, second, and Walter Morrison and Marjorie Day third prizes. For the best efforts at polite concealment of poverty, Bill McCracken secured a box of the only original Queen Aroma cigars and Miss Fish a bunch of genuine American beauties. Bill Wrather also was awarded a bouquet of bananas and Helen Peck a magnificent spinach. Another box of Aromas materialized the hobo's dream of Paradise for Hewitt.

The Leap Year party will go down in the University annals as a revelation of the true position of supposed leaders in Chicago's society. After the names of most of the seniors, who before had complacently seated themselves on a high social pedestal, there will not be found mention of this honor. The Leap Year staff of the Daily Maroon, headed by Esther Hall, attended en masse, and was disturbed only by the fear of rain and the resulting necessity for cabs. Bill Hewitt was probably the first man invited, but as he suggested the affair, the glory of that fact is somewhat clouded.

During the Summer quarter a dance was given in the Club for the coeds of Southern clime and sallow complexion.

Following a custom inaugurated the year before, a well attended reception was held in honor of President and Mrs. Judson, February 11, 1908.

There has been an almost overwhelming demand for the use of the Club by University organizations. Four of the girl's clubs appropriated it for formals, and others for informal dances. There has been rarely a week that some undergraduate college has not held a dance and all of the classes have had at least one party.

The Club smokers of the year have been marked by pleasant informality. At the first Dean Vincent with valuable precision shot bits of his vocabulary at receptive freshmen in an address of welcome, and Coach Stagg put on, for the first time, a song and dance stunt, his audience enthusiastically swelling the chorus. Burton's "Strumming Singing Scouts," followed in a melodious musical melange, and Wallie Steffen and Tommie Taylor, and later Kid Tetarsky and Shortie Johnson, more than satisfied the fight fans with their exhibitions of pugilistic propensities. Each bout by the way, was called a draw. The pie eating contest, it will not be forgotten, was won by Fat Smith.

At another smoker Cartoonist Hopkins of The Motor Age, did creations in crayon, and Don Crane and George Hunt added a page to the history of histrionic horrors with an original sketch.

The Reynolds Club Commission again provided for and entertained the contestants in the Interscholastic Conference Meet. Open house was kept for them for several days.

The Club on numerous occasions throughout the year also has been thrown open to national educational bodies meeting at the University, the American Association for the Advancement of Science being perhaps the most prominent example.

The members appointed on the entertainment committee were: William F. Hewitt, chairman, Henry B. Roney, Charles B. Jordan, Hannibal H. Chandler, Jr., Arthur G. Bovee, Luther D. Fernald, Charles H. Ireland, Wellington D. Jones, Paul A. Buhlig and John G. Schommer. Those on the committee for the new year are: John T. Dille, chairman, Renslow P. Sherer, Herschel G. Shaw, Walter P. Steffen, Daniel W. Ferguson, George E. Fuller, Weaver Chamberlain, Charles H. Ireland, and William P. MacCracken, Jr.

W. B. Osgood

SCORE CLUB

" 'Tis seldom, if ever,
You find them together,
The Time, the Place and the Girl."

AND yet, if asked where they could be found, the Chicago grad might look back on the most cherished of his memories and say: " 'Twas at the afternoon dances of the Score Club in Rosalie." And you in your business office on a trying Saturday afternoon, would remember too, and, looking idly beyond the pretty little stenographer into the past, you would see Rosalie, where illusions were never banished, and where bubbles never broke. You recall how softly you glided over the floor to the entrancing strains of "Vilia;" how you looked at the mass of golden hair near your shoulder, and into those eyes with a dreamland of glories behind them. You remember the little balcony chats and the scramble for the frappé bowl. All that was at Rosalie.

So the season of 1907-08 came around and Frank Madison Orchard took the presidency of the club. Harry Osgood Latham was chairman of the dance committee. The program pleased, as always, and if the orchestra did overwork the "Merry Widow" strains it was only because it wished to please its public. The barn dance furnished a welcome diversion, and was popular here, as elsewhere. The club was able to hold all dances as planned, and enjoyed a good patronage, speaking well for the coming fall season.

Love and Larry

It was the old, old story. Larry's heart was broken. Every detail had been so romantic and had pointed with such unfailing certainty to the words "lived happily ever after," that the unhappy ending had galled. But wait! You shall hear the whole story.

Larry had come to college the year before as a Freshman, had undergone the usual excitement of rushing parties and had at last been pledged to Sigma Rho. Now if it had been something else—but anyway it was on his pledge night that Graham, an old ΣP , led him to his sanctum and there on the mantle stood her picture. Now six weeks of masculine society, however jovial, is too much for any Freshman, and Larry—well, he appreciated a pretty girl rather more than most.

And being only a Freshman, he exclaimed, enthusiastically, "What a peach of a girl!" Graham smiled. Graham was engaged to a girl in Foster. Larry still gazed pensively at the picture.

"What a peach of a girl!" he repeated. "I say, who is your friend?"

He asked the question in such a studied, off-hand manner that Graham hesitated, then drawled slowly:

"Daisy—Daisy West. Nice girl, too."

"A college girl?" pursued Larry.

"Yes, but not here this year. She lives out West at Atchison, Kansas, volunteered Graham.

Larry had gained his end, and Miss Daisy West of Atchison, Kansas, was registered that night in a certain book all too full of other verses written on other nights—to other peaches. But you see it was his first of the year.

Next morning Larry was thoughtful. His fellows joshed him on forgotten maidens, but Larry only slipped away and quite unintentionally—oh quite!—he took out pen and paper—his new Sigma Rho paper. He wrote a most modest letter, humbly suggesting that a certain maid could make a poor lonely Freshman happy—I have told before of Larry's long rushing—by writing a line of comfort to him and—but Larry was a fluent writer. He read the letter over, then quite unintentionally he addressed it to Miss Daisy Wells and stroked the chin where his beard was not, in complacent satisfaction. In his pocket the letter lay for two whole days. Then he mailed it and waited.

Graham merely nodded his sage, senior head, when Larry showed a marked preference for his room, his couch, his mantle shelf, and he never winked when one day Miss Daisy West failed to smile at him from her accustomed place. Graham, though, was engaged to a girl at Foster.

I don't say Larry was a changed man. He still took pretty girls to dances and ate the fudge of wise ones, but he never took the same one twice in succession, and never failed to look at a picture that lay in his drawer each night. He even wore the key to the drawer as a watch charm, and he waited. There was no need of blushing when a small, blue, scented envelope with a postmark "Atchison" was brought to him, but he did, and he kissed the picture when he had read its timid contents, which marked the beginning of the correspondence.

Letters traveled quickly. Larry substituted letters for themes in English II. Larry dreamed in Math and was found wanting even in Astronomy. One day Larry expressed his pen to Atchison, Kansas. Then he began to talk of "college as a waste of time," and of "going into business." The deans, on tinted stationery agreed with him that college was no place for Larry, but tinted letters from Atchison quite outshone the Junior deans.

The one letter that told that Miss West would be in Chicago for the Sigma Rho formal was read a hundred times by Larry's beaming eyes. He bought a gold frame for the picture and left it boldly on the chiffonier. And all this happiness came while Larry was only a Freshman.

The day before the formal, regardless of recent quizzes, Larry went whistling out of Cobb, head high and heart higher. Larry stubbed his toe! Larry fell! Larry sprained his knee, and Larry's heart was broken! Still, Freshmen do not die of grief, and after awhile he began to think of the girl. He was to meet her with a rose in his left lapel. He asked Graham to meet Miss West and bring her back to tea. He did not explain details. His brothers put him in the window to wait. He asked for all the pictures in his room—but he only looked at one. He had timed the trains to a minute, but long before Graham's great red car came in sight down the street he had settled back to beat a nervous tattoo on the window, and wait.

His blood waltzed giddily round his heart, and he waited. The red car came in sight, whizzed up to the house, stopped. Larry blushed, then choked. Graham had stepped out of the car. But—. The other passenger sprang to the ground, called merrily to the crowd on the porch, which answered: "Hello-o-o, Daisy, old girl. Going in for any Blackfriar stunts this year?"

GET A TALKING MACHINE!

Our University records reproduce perfectly all the addresses, public speeches and after dinner pleasantries of our representative men. Why sit through several hours of talk in a stuffy hall or class-room when our records enable you to hear the same speech in your own home!

The University Talking Machine Co. now offers for the first time the following records, compiled with great care:

George E. Vincent: "Freshmen and Gladiators, I Greet You."

This is a perfect reproduction of this celebrated address, also known as "The First of October Speech." On account of the high speed to which our talking machines are geared the record is able to produce perfectly this rapid-fire address. By adjusting the electric fan at the side of the machine the listener will get all the effects of a windy discourse.

Professor Fredric Blanchard: "The Aesthetic and Socializing Influence of the University of Chicago Military Band."

No home should be without this splendid oration. It is known to have packed Mandel time and again at the weekly band concerts. People have shed tears on hearing it, and those who came to find fault remained to weep. Specially prepared by the University Talking Machine Co.

Dean William D. MacClintock: "The Liberty of the Press."

This is a succinct lecture on the rise and glorious predominance of the Press. Dr. MacClintock knows the habits of the reporter well and has given us a remarkable presentation of this animal's characteristics. Instructive, exhaustive and entertaining.

Professor Frederick Starr: "The Sunday School and the Home."

A splendid address by this prominent worker in the Missionary field. That part of the lecture which deals with the missionary himself is especially rich in diction, comprehensive and at the same time terse and to the point. We recommend this for Fourth of July celebrations. May also be used to advantage by Nihilists and others planning bomb parties. Sent packed with care.

Boning for the Exams

It was almost ten. They were sitting in the big settee that is nearly hidden behind the grand piano. There was nobody else in the parlor, not a soul—even the lights had gone out.

From far away in the distance came prolonged humming, as of many voices speaking in long, ceaseless chants.

"What is the sound?" asked Percival, who was of an enquiring mind, since the only mark he ever got from his instructors was a question mark.

"They are boning for the exams," responded Clarice, with a sigh. "Alas! I, too, have exams. To-morrow, dearest, in English Three. And I know nothing whatever about unity, emphasis and coherence.

"Let me teach you, Sister," said Percival. "When you love me and I love you and we both love each other—well, that's unity."

"Oh!" said the maid. "And what is coherence?"

"I will demonstrate," said the youth. "Coherence is doing things in their logical order. See, I place my arm carefully around you like this; then with a slight effort I contract it. Then I take your right hand in my left—that is coherence."

"Oh! And what is emphasis?"

"This," said Percival. Gently he brought her head to a level with his and gazed soulfully into the liquid depths of her eyes. For a moment he hung longingly on her look, then he carefully maneuvered to evade her nose, and place the desired emphasis in the proper dormitory.

"There," said Percival. "That is emphasis. Do you think the exams will be very hard?"

"They will be very, very hard," responded Clarice, with another wistful sigh. "Let's review some more."

Too Good to be True, or, His Mother's Son

It was the bewitching hour of 10:30 a. m. as our hero stepped briskly out of Ellis. The campus was wrapped in silence except for an occasional warble from one of the tree tops, where a sweet-voiced Three Quarters pledge poured forth his heart to the azure heavens. Presently a tall figure emerged from the deep thicket in front of Cobb and lurked toward him. It was none other than Reginald Vere de Vere, the Junior class politician!!!

Our hero paled to the roots of his hair at the sight of him.

"You!!!" he exclaimed thickly. "Is it you! Why do you pursue me?"

"Because the Junior class elections come next week and you are to run for president," said Reginald with a hollow laugh. "Pretty fine, eh? Picture in the Cap and Gown, Maroon write-up to send home to mother, and," lowering his voice—"it's a perfect cinch if you say so."

"What—what do you mean?" faltered our hero, and he blushed rose red.

"Just this," said the other speaking in a low, tense tone. "You say the word and I'll tip the fellows off. A little dinner down town for some, a box of cigarettes to a few more, a few promises of support for the candidates they want—which we can keep or not—and it's done! All I ask is that you help me out a little on the expenses. I'd do it all for you if I could, since you're a member of the University Choir, but I'm a little short just now. Are you on?"

A light of understanding had gradually come over the face of our hero, and looking stealthily around, he was about to answer, but as he saw a tall, svelte figure approaching, he drew himself up proudly and replied in a clear, ringing voice:

"Never, Reginald Vere de Vere!! Whatever goes home to my mother must have honor behind it and not money!"

As the svelte figure passed he murmured: "Gee, I hope that Mortar Board heard me."

For a moment he stood thusly, thoughtfully gnawing the west corner of his lip, then with a swift glance about him he turned on his heel and whispered hoarsely:

"Sure I'm on. I'll meet you in the Commons at lunch. So long!"

The Girls

I met a few girls while a Freshman;
I thought I was wise at the time;
Went in for the picking of peaches,
And felt like a king in his prime.
The one had her home down in Hyde Park
And one said she lived in Green Bay,
The third was a maid from Peoria,
The last lives in Foster today.

I wasn't a very shy freshman,
As from this small tale you will see.
She smiled at a friend in the classroom—
And I—well, I thought she meant me,
So I butted right in for a talk-fest,
But her only remark was a "Sir!"
Then I froze in my talk, beat it quick for a walk,
And I learned a good lesson from her.

Then I met the fair one from Wisconsin,
The lass who grew up in Green Bay;
She was a small-town girl with money—
At least it came to me that way.
I'll admit she proved somewhat expensive,
And an heiress, of course, as it were,
Could not quite comprehend that the busted can't spend,
So I had to quit going with her.

Then I met one who cared for athletics,
Wore out the golf links in her town;
Held records in hockey and baseball—
No wonder I had to come down.
She left off her hat, wore a sweater,
Was always a-jump and astir.
I'm naturally quiet; on so hard a diet
I couldn't quite keep pace with her.

For the Fourth I won't take consolation,
For I don't seem to know where I'm at.
When I think of that tailor-made costume
And eyes that shine under that hat—
I think she liked me, but we quarreled;
'Tis sad that such things will occur,
But when both prides are strong, and you feel you are wrong:
I just guess I must make up to Her.

I've met all the girls; I'm a senior,
But I'm sure that I don't know them all,
Yet the lessons I learned while a freshman
Have since saved me many a fall.
So the end of it's sitting and thinking,
A puzzle they always will be.
Let me give you a hunch, nish the whole bloomin' bunch,
And you won't get the bumps that got me

The Fusser's Fall, or, The System Breaks Down

(From the minutes of the Senior Council, Jan. 28)

Harold Heartbreaker was elected leader of the Senior Prom, by a unanimous vote of the Council.

ALPHA KAPPA UPSILON HOUSE, January 28.

DEAR HELEN:

I've just been elected leader of the Varsity Senior Prom. I knew you'd be glad to hear of this, because there's just one girl in the world I'd like to share the honor of leading it with. It's a lot to ask her, I know, to come clear over from Berlin just to please me, but perhaps she could find some excuse to cut the foreign visit short—perhaps she won't need an excuse.

Do you think she'll do it?

"Sincerely"

HAL.

DEAR MAY:

DEAR HAROLD:

FOSTER HALL, January 28th.

I hope I didn't seem rude to you yesterday, but I was so delighted to hear of your good fortune that I quite forgot what I started out to ask you, before you packed me off to class. Are you, brilliant social light, busy on the evening of February 28th? The Psi Gams are giving their annual dance then, and I'd be delighted if Harold Heartbreaker will take me.

Cordially

RUTH.

P. S.—Foster Hall still occupies the southeastern corner of the campus.

FOSTER HALL, January 28th.

DEAR JACK:

It's awfully good of you to ask me to go to the Senior Prom, and I should be delighted to go with you—except I'm under a sort of half-promise already to go. Do you think you could wait a couple of days? In that time, perhaps, I could arrange it so that I could go with you. Could you, Jack?

Cordially

RUTH.

The Campustrians request the pleasure of Mr. Heartbreaker's presence at their annual dance on the evening of March the sixth.

DEAR HAROLD:

The Kappas are going to give their dinner dance on the first of May this year. I wanted to remind you of this informally, and to hope that you'll be good enough to make it a red letter day for me this year, as you did last.

Sincerely

Green Hall, January twenty-fourth.

MY DEAR MR. HEARTBREAKER:

I want to remind you that you haven't paid "The Oaks" a visit for nearly two weeks, and you promised faithfully to take Sunday dinner with us within the month.

Correction—The Maroon regrets the publication of an unfortunate statement in its issue of yesterday that Mr. Heartbreaker would lead the Senior Prom with Miss Jollyer. Denial has come from both Miss Jollyer and Mr. Heartbreaker. Miss Jollyer will be out of town at the time of the Prom, and Mr. Heartbreaker will lead with Miss Beatrice Fayery, as noted elsewhere in this issue.

The Washington Promenade, the greatest social event of the Varsity year, was held last evening in Bartlett gymnasium. The grand march was led by Mr. Harold Heartbreaker, with his sister, Miss Lucille Heartbreaker. Mr. and Miss Heartbreaker left immediately after the grand march, Miss Heartbreaker being taken ill. The event was a great success.

Song of a Sufferer

In an age that's now departed
(For which fact we're not down hearted)
There were manners of procedure most unkind.
If the personal opinions
Of a baron's lowly minions
Were not just the ones to suit their master's mind
Without council or inventive
But with treatment quite effective
He would quickly make them sorry for their sin;
By applying thumb-screws, fire,
Or what e'er he might desire
In short order he'd restore his discipline.
That the torture was exquisite
We may learn should we but visit
Any castle of this time, built ages back.
But of all machines most vicious,
For each punishment propitious,
Was the instrument the Ancients called the Rack.
Since those days the alterations
In the customs of the nations
Have decreed the wage of sin a milder sort.
Yet here still we have prevailing
In this preceptorial jailing
Something fiendish in the Quarterly Report.
Tho to literally bust 'em
Was the old, compelling custom,
With the levers and the irons, ages back;
We are similarly treated
When, in Cobb Hall we are greeted
By those yellow bits of torture—on the Rack!

THE FRESHMAN MEMBER OF THE SOCIAL COMMITTEE

"Good afternoon. I mean—hello! Oh, dear! did you hear me say that stiff 'good afternoon' to that perfectly splendid man I've known all my life? I just know he felt hurt, but I had my mouth all fixed to say 'good afternoon' for the rest of the day. You see I'm on the social committee of our college, and I think one should show a certain amount of dignity in such a position. Yes, I'm a freshman. Why did you ask?"

"Oh, good afternoon, Mr. Brown. I'm sorry, but I'm afraid I can't give you a dance. I'm not supposed to dance this afternoon. Yes, you see I'm on the social committee and it's one of my duties to see that everybody else's program is filled, so of course I won't get any time to dance myself. Perhaps I can find a girl to take my place. Now, there's a girl over there! Do come over and let me introduce you. Which one? Why, what difference does it make? Well, if you must know, it's the one in the purple skirt and pink waist with her hair done in that funny way. She doesn't dance very well, I guess, and I'd love to get a partner for her. Why, Mr. Brown, you're not going? Oh, you must meet a man right away? Well, I'll try and get you an introduction later. Good-bye."

"Oh, good afternoon, Tom! Yes, it does sound funny. I'm saying 'good afternoon' to everybody to-day, though, because I'm on the social committee. A dance? No; you see I'm not dancing to-day; I'm just introducing and smiling and looking nice. You know I'm on the soc—, What? No, really I can't give you a dance. There's the dean looking at me now and I wouldn't dare. I'll get a girl for you, though. Here's one I'd like you to meet. Which one? Never mind which one. I want you to meet her! Why don't you come? Well, then, it's the one in the corner sitting with her hands folded in her lap. Yes, with the glasses and the Phi Beta Kappa key. Tom! What did you call her? It's too bad we can't all be good looking, of course! Well, hurry up, then, if you have to telephone. I'll introduce you later and you can take her home. Oh! you're going early? I think you're mean. Good-bye."

"Hello, girlie! You're awfully late. That's so, you're on the social committee, too, aren't you? Tell me, does my hair look all right? I forgot to wear a net to-day—didn't even wear a veil. Oh, of course you'd say so. I bet it looks like a fright. No, yours looks dandy—really it does, but there's a little smudge on your cheek—no, the other one—right there. Oh! you made it worst. Now it's all right. Oh, dear, we must get busy. This is the fourth dance and I haven't introduced a soul yet. Do you know who that man is standing over by the banisters? No, the tall one with the Warfield pompadour. My dear, I rave over him simply rave! Isn't he adorable? Don't you know him? Oh, dear, if I weren't on the social committee I'd hope for a dance. Isn't that the grandest two-step they're playing? How I wish I could dance! But I said I wouldn't because I'm on the soc—"

"Good afternoon, Mr. White. No, I'm not deserted. I'm not dancing to-day. No, I'm on the social committee of our college and we aren't supposed to make out programs. Well, since you're so kind, I think that I will have a little frappe, although I ought to be introducing people. Oh, I know what I'll do! I'll introduce you to some one after I get my frappe. What did you say? You're not meeting people now? Are you joking or did your grandmother really die? How do you happen to be dancing, then?—oh, I see, just with a few friends. By the way, do you know that tall man standing up by the bannisters? Yes, he's just turning around. The one with a cute little red knit necktie. Oh, don't you know him? No, not especially. I just wondered who he was. Is that the next dance? I must go and introduce people. It's such a responsibility being on the social com—. Oh, certainly I'll excuse you—good-bye."

"Good afternoon, Mr. Black. No, I haven't this dance taken—but you see I can't dance. Yes, I'm sorry, too, but I'm on the social committee, so I'm not supposed to dance. This is the seventh dance, isn't it? Just think how many I've missed—oh, dear, it's my favorite waltz! Isn't that exasperating? By the way, do you know that man just walking away from the bannisters? No, not that one—the tall one in the gray suit and tan shoes—why, he's coming toward us!"

"He is? A fraternity brother of yours? How perfectly lovely! I should say I would! Good afternoon, Mr. Gray. I'm awfully pleased to meet you! This dance? No, I haven't it taken, but you see I'm on the soc—oh, dear—of course you may have it. Isn't that music heavenly? Have you really wanted to meet me all afternoon? Why didn't you ask sooner, then? Don't say that! You know I wanted to. Didn't you notice that I haven't danced a single dance since I saw you? By the way, the dean's gone home, hasn't he?"

"See where Beethoven sits alone—a dream of days elysian,
A crownless king upon the throne, reflected in a vision—
The man who strikes the potent chords which make the world, in wonder,

To produce an instrument in which the master passion of a Beethoven could find perfect expression, is the inspiration which dominates the makers of the Crown Piano.

About Georgia Eliot Jones and Others

BEING AN EXTRACT FROM A LETTER HOME.

DEAR MOTHER:

Rebecca and I intended going to the concert this afternoon but we were all out of clean turnovers and handkerchiefs and simply had to wash some. While we were washing them in one of the bath tubs, Georgia Edith Jones was waiting for a bowl to shampoo her hair in and she told us some things about the latest story she has written. She would have read it to us if she hadn't wanted Grace Stokes to be the first to hear it all. Grace has already heard the first twenty-five pages but she was dreadfully worried over an exam she was cramming for when Georgia read it to her and she kind of lost the thread of the story. She is awfully anxious to hear the other seventy-five pages and is going to let Georgia know the first minute she has to spare. Georgia says that any number of her ancestors have been celebrated writers.

For fear that the turnovers and things would look yellow, we boiled them in our chafing dish afterwards. That always makes them so nice and white. Rebecca started the fire in the charcoal iron and Georgia Eliot Jones and Sarah Peek took turns drying their hair over our radiator. They became so excited in an argument as to whether or not it is necessary to have had a love affair before one can write a good story that Georgia upset a bottle of bluing and spilled it all down the side of the wall and on the floor. And I have had to deposit $5 against damages!

While we were cleaning up the bluing, Mary Stone came in with her chafing dish and the sugar for fudge. She said she had decided that it was worth losing her chance for Phi Beta Kappa just to see how much she could write about a subject about which she knew absolutely nothing. Georgia, still burning with argumentative zeal, looked at Mary with a disapproving eye and coldly remarked that fudge was entirely out of place among people of literary tendencies who were discussing the more serious problems of the higher life. Mary didn't quite understand and so kept on grating a piece of chocolate. Georgia has a beautiful voice, which she exercises constantly on high trills and runs when she is under full control of her artistic temperament and is thinking out a new plot. So when Sara's iron smoked a little Georgia was dreadfully worried for fear the smoke would ruin her voice and thought about going to her own room. Georgia says all her family have always had beautiful voices.

You know I wrote you about losing my black knit slippers about two months ago. Well, I thought the ones Sara was wearing seemed awfully familiar and when I asked her whose they were she looked quite injured and asked how she could be expected to remember where she borrowed every little thing. She said that she had forgotten to tell me that she borrowed my evening coat last night and that I'd better take it home when I came after my slippers.

The fudge was very good and Mary ate the most of it and said later that she didn't want any dinner. Georgia went down to see Grace Stokes and Sara with my curling iron went out to look for a lamp. Rebecca and I had just fifteen minutes left to dress for dinner in.

The evening gym class is just over and I am still wearing Sara's gym suit. Sara seldom goes to gym because, as Georgia says, her womanly pride revolts at even the idea of appearing in so unbecoming a garb.

The insertion you asked Rebecca and me to buy and send you—The girls across the hall have just invited me to a fudge party and Mary wants me to come out into the hall and teach her the barn dance. I'll write more in the morning.

CHICAGO BUSINESS COLLEGE

It enjoys, as few schools of its kind enjoy, a national reputation. The large attendance and constantly increasing patronage are evidence of the popularity of the institution, and the most substantial proof of its worth and superiority.

A practical education insures permanent employment as no other education does. This kind of an education is not an expense, a luxury or an ornament but a necessity—an investment which pays the largest dividends.

Have you stopped going to school and are you satisfied with your education? You can not achieve success unless you have the particular kind of knowledge and training necessary to secure it.

"If I were a young man and had to make my choice to graduate at a classical college and stop there, or to graduate at a business college and stop there, I would take the business college in preference."

ALBERT G. PORTER, Ex-Governor of Indiana.

Are you a good business penman, and are you rapid and accurate in figures? Can you write a promissory note, a due bill, a receipt, a draft and other commercial paper commonly used?

The essentials of Bookkeeping, Business Law, Shorthand, etc. may be acquired in a comparatively short time; also, a good and rapid long-hand style of writing, as each instructor is an expert in his own particular line of work.

"The best advice I can offer is for every young man to avail himself of a scholarship in some first-class commercial school. No matter what it costs, it will be the best investment he can make."

CHARLOTTE KENE.

The Fussier in Distress

A youth there was, of manner most serene;
Quite famed in Foster, not unknown in Greene.
The model he of amorous freshmen all,
In choosing a tie or making talk that's small.
He ne'er had flunked, or worse, committed a fault,
Could yet on such the god's displeasure flow?
Ah, yes, alas! See how he pensive sits,
And crushes that white cigarette to bits.
Fierce thought must surge beneath that brow so fair,
That he arrange his trousers not, nor hair.
If papa's threatened failure now had chanced,
Refused a picture, one with whom he'd danced!
Some dire event must sure take place this day,
For had not Famous failed to bring his Gray?
But no such thoughts did now his smile destroy,
For worse the thing that galled this winning boy.
The leap year dance was only three days off;
He had no bid, the freshmen—ah!—would laugh.
Already seemed their mocking lips did curl,
To see destruction round their leader whirl.
And he had fussed and won so many maids—
More than they ever would, those trim young blades.
And now, to carrying ices relegated,
A sort of college-widower he, belated.
In such distress he lived the next days through,
His mind filled only with that Book of Blue.
No lily hand reached out to save his shame,
He was not at the dance, so lost to fame.
And all his disposition sweet was marred,
His easy confidence and pride were jarred.
A desperate resolution straight he took,
Ne'er upon maidens, ne'er again to look.
I think carbolic rid him of this coil,
Or candy helped him his complexion spoil.
Why dwell upon a tale of such affairs?
They're much too sad—and after all, who cares?

At the Mystic Hour of 10:30 A. M.

The pretty Coed stepped out of Cold at to go directly in front of the tall College Man, who was industriously trying not to look as if he had been waiting there ten minutes for her.

"Good morning," they both said simultaneously. "Going my way?" casually asked the College Man.

"Which way were you going?" she queried smilingly, remembering the stationary position in which she had found him.

"Oh, I was just on my way up to the Law Library," he said, as he saw her start in that direction, then taking her books and falling in step beside her continued, "It's been some time since I've seen you, hasn't it?" "Has it?" she asked nonchalantly. "Yes, I guess it has been a long time."

"Well, I don't care! It's pretty tough when a girl's so deucedly popular that a fellow has to put up with such crumbly as carrying her books across the campus!"

They were walking fast and had reached the walk leading to the Law Library but he was so engrossed in the recollection of his woes that he was about to stride past when the Coed, slowing up, reminded him.

"I believe you said you were going to the Library, didn't you. I'll take my books, thank you."

He stopped but made no move to give them to her.

"How far did you say you were going?" he asked.

"I didn't say, but I have some—some errands to do. The first one's in Foster, I believe."

"Oh, that reminds me. I've got to see a fellow in Walker. Awfully glad you reminded me. I'll just go along with you, if you don't mind."

"Oh, not at all. It really is a great relief to have these books out of my way for awhile. Do you know, I believe my arm is growing in a perfect triangle from being hooked around a pile of books all the time. 'It looks allright to me,' he said, looking admiringly at the slim arm swinging along beside him. "Oh, is isn't as bad as all that," she replied ambiguously with a laugh, "I hope I'm not a cripple yet."

"And I certainly hope you never will be. If I can be of any service as a Prevention of—of—what shall I call it? Prevention of Distortion to Educational Biceps? At any rate I offer both my perfectly good arms in the service."

"That's awfully good of you, I'm sure," she murmured. Perhaps I shall call on them some day—but here we are at Foster!" They stopped but she made no move to leave. "I wonder if she's in her room," she said, thoughtfully scanning the windows for some evidence on the subject. "She might be out, you know."

"Yes, I shouldn't be at all surprised—this time of day, and everything—Why don't you wait till you have more time? It must be twenty minutes to eleven," the last appealingly.

"I guess I will," she said, turning away quickly, "I can run in at noon. Are you going to Walker, did you say?"

"I—er—yes! Oh! is this Walker right here? Why come to think of it, that fellow won't be here now. I think he's in—in the gym. Would you mind walking down that way? It will only take a minute, and I'll take care of the books," he said, patting them persuasively. "I really ought to—do my errands, but if it will only take a minute—" and she quickened her steps beside him.

"What were we talking about?" he asked reminiscently as they turned down Lexington toward the Gym. "Oh yes, about when I'm to come over again. As I was saying, you won't allow anybody over on school nights and then you have every Friday, Saturday and Sunday taken. I don't see where I come in, do you?"

"I'm afraid you exaggerate," she said, pointing a little, "I never said that all my Fridays and Saturdays, and Sundays were taken, did I?"

"No, you didn't say so all at once, but every time I try to get one, each previous one seems to be taken."

"Now, Charley," she said looking up at him in soft reproach, "You know that isn't so, at all. The trouble is you don't ask soon enough. Did you want to come over this Friday night?"

"Well, one there's a smoker on at the frat house but—~~and~~ I come over."

"Why, I expect to go to a dance, but—"

"Except to go to a dance? If that doesn't beat anything! What on earth did you ask me if I wanted to come over for it you were going to a dance?" he snorted, picking the edge of the sidewalk. "Just like a girl!"

"I wouldn't lose my temper about it," she said sweetly, "It's lots of satisfaction to know that you wanted to come, anyway. But if you were going to a smoker, how could you come to see me over if I were going to be home? Here's the Gym. Didn't you say you wanted to see me one of these days?"

He bent a finger and was niggling one toe into the ground at the edge of the sidewalk. At her question he glanced nervously at the building, at her, and then at the ground. "No, I guess I won't be there now. It might make you late for your errands. Haven't you an eleven o'clock class?"

"Yes."

"Then we'd better go back."

So they turned and retraced their steps down Lexington.

"Where is your next errand?" he asked.

"My next errand!" she repeated with a puzzled look, then quickly, "Oh yes, I have to see some one in Kent."

"Good," he said as he thought of the distance. "I mean—do you?" Then as they turned Kent-wards, "But you haven't told me yet when I can come over."

"Oh, didn't I?" she said carelessly, "You didn't tell me either why you asked me to come Friday when you were going to a smoker."

"Because I'd cut a smoker any day to call on you," he said with spirit.

"Jollier!" she teased, "A man that would cut one date would cut another. I hate people who break dates."

"But I wouldn't do it for any one else," he protested.

"Oh, wouldn't you? You wouldn't cut a dance with any one else either, would you?"

"I wouldn't—what?" a light of perception spreading over his face.

"You wouldn't cut a dance with any one else either," she repeated firmly, looking steadily at the sidewalk.

"Grace," lowering his voice, "You didn't think I cut that dance at the last Reynolds Club on purpose, did you? Did you?" eagerly. "I don't see how I could think anything else. Usually when one disappears at the time that one is supposed to dance with some one, and is seen later continuing one's program it is termed in college language cutting a dance! I presume it is very flimsy evidence but that is the grounds for my statement and—here is Kent," she concluded significantly, reaching for her books. He pushed them farther under his arm.

"Look here," he said, "I'm not going to let you go that way. I want to explain: Can't you do your errand some other time? Its three minutes to eleven now," consulting his watch, "Where is your class?"

"In Lexington."

"Then you'll just have time to make it. Mine's in Ellis, but I'll go with you."

"Don't inconvenience yourself," she said sweetly, "I can manage the books that far alone I think."

"Now Grace, I don't think that's fair. If you only knew how cut-up I've been over this. I didn't know what was the matter with you. Every time I saw you on the campus you sailed by so fast, I could hardly get a chance to say "Hello." I've called you up a dozen times or more but you were out, or the line was busy, or something. I thought your partner would explain to you that night. My sister asked me to take a friend of hers who was visiting her, and she got an awful sick headache after about three dances. I had to call a cab and take her home finally, although I was hoping that she could stay long enough for our dance. I explained to Dike about it and he said he'd tell you. Then as soon as I'd taken her home I nearly broke my neck to get back in hopes I'd still be in time for our dance, but it was past, and then since I was there I thought I'd finish up my program as a stag. I couldn't get a look at you even. You were always in the center of a crowd, or else dancing. Is that why you've treated me so? Is it, Grace?" The College Man was pathetic now.

"Yes," she said softly. "I didn't understand. I'm sorry I was unjust."

They had reached Lexington Hall and halted in front of the door. The last tardy girl had bolted by them to her overdue "eleven o'clock." She looked up at him slowly.

"Do you still want to come over Friday night?" she asked with a queer little smile.

"You know I do," he answered feverishly.

"Then you may."

"But the dance—"

"I said I expected to go. I've changed my mind. It is a woman's privilege you know."

"You're a peach, Grace," said the College Man fervently. Then with a roguish look, "Will you promise not to be angry if I say something?"

"That depends on what it is," she said dubiously.

"No, promise!"

"Alright, then, I promise."

"I don't believe you had any errands at all."

"Ah—The errand?" she gasped indignantly.

"Remember your promise!" he warned with a laugh.

"Well, gawwan, I know you never even thought of going to the Law Library, or to any other place, either, and besides you could tell me!" She flushed with an air of triumph.

He looked straight into her eyes. "Guilty," he said.

For an instant she returned his look, then lowering her eyes, "Ditto," she murmured, "Goodbye," then turned and went slowly up the steps.

"Here eleven o'clock class!" muttered the College Man as he strode toward Ellis.

A Parody

The quality of flunking is a fad—
It droppeth with a gentle sting, quite sudden,
U'pon the man "below;" it is twice curst—
It curseth him that gives and him that gets.
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The cruel instructor less than cap and gown;
Exams show force of intellectual might,
The documents that put us in his power,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of all;
But flunking is e'en worse than these exams.
It is recorded in the offices;
'Tis public made by yellow envelopes;
And students, fearful, watch the bulletins
When flunking season's near us. Therefore, Deans,
Though flunking be thy right, remember this,
That in your course in college you did flunk
Examinations. You did pray for mercy,
And that same prayer should teach you all to render Deeds of mercy.

We'd know 'em by their tailor-y,
Their smirk and smile, and a' that,
And e'en their stride and shoulder-y
Would tell 'twas they for a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
With bonnets none, and a' that,
What need to brand 'em with a hat?
A Soph's a Soph, for a' that.

Fridstein (making an absurd deduction in College Algebra)—Therefore, A equals B.

Prof. Slaughter—Impossible! That would be like taking a bath without water.

Fridstein—How about a sun-bath?

Long (the punster)—My entire family has bled to death.

Phi Gam Brother (suspiciously)—How is that?

Long—A humorous vein has been running in our family for three generations.

Fiji (angrily)—Oh, I see; joked to death.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST AMUSEMENT EXPOSITION

The Stairs

I.

See the winding iron stairs—
 Endless stairs!
What a world of weariness their awful number bears!
 How they echo, never-flagging
 In the gloomy early morn!
Oh, the tired bodies dragging
 Feet, recalcitrantly lagging,
 Weight too heavy to be borne;
 Crying time, time, time,
 In the never-ending climb,
To the topmost floor of Cobb, where an hour's rest repairs
 The havoc wrought inside us by the
 Stairs, stairs, stairs—
By the infinite succession of the stairs.

II.

 'Tis another flight of stairs—
 Gray stone stairs—
What a line of expletives their vision justly dares
 In the middle of the day
 How I plod my weary way
 Much too tired out to talk
 I can only walk and walk
 To the top,
With a clamorous pulsation of my poor, hard-working heart
With the stifling, almost bursting over-exercising heart.
 Leaping higher, higher, higher
 With a desperate desire
 And a resolute endeavor
 Now—now to sit or never,
In an easy chair to flop.
 Oh, the stairs, stairs, stairs!
 Who can understand the cares
 They involve?
 How I ardently adore
 Classes on the lowest floor—
The problem, registration next shall solve.
 Yes, the body surely knows,
 By the wending
 Never-ending
 All the drear fatiguing woes;
Yes, the body surely shares
 Babel's trouble—
 All flight double.
One just utterly despairs
When he contemplates the mounting three times daily
 Of the stairs
 Of the stairs, stairs, stairs, stairs,
 Stairs, stairs, stairs—
The curse-provoking bondage of the stairs.
